

Hull's Praise of Kellogg Past Meant to allance Rebuff to Ethiopia

WASHINGTON — Foreign diplomats scratched their heads in bewilderment last week when Cordell Hull, who had turned thumbs down on Emperor Haile Selassie's appeal under the Kellogg Pact, suddenly reversed himself and came out with glowing praise of that Pact.

Three things were behind this: Mr. Hull's own naivete; a call by the British Ambassador; and a call by the French Ambassador.

Mr. Hull is a most altruistic gentleman. He neither believes in, nor understands, diplomatic innuendo. Reared in the mountains of Tennessee, accustomed to a vocabulary which would electrify the average diplomatic tea, Mr. Hull did not appreciate all the interpretations placed upon his blunt note vetoing the Ethiopian appeal.

Therefore, when the French and British Ambassadors called upon him and reported that their governments felt he had deserted the Kellogg Pact, Mr. Hull was flabbergasted. He asked the two ambassadors to inform their governments that the United States by no means had deserted the Pact.

Then feeling that there still might be some apprehension, it was arranged that a friendly newspaperman should ask questions of Mr. Hull in press conference. In reply, Mr. Hull issued his second statement, praising the Kellogg Pact. However, he was careful not to mention either Ethiopia or Italy.

Net effect of Hull's two statements was that the United States took a plain interest in the preservation of the Kellogg Pact but was prepared to do nothing about it.

Naval Information

Foreign naval attaches in Washington have become increasingly restive over the amount of information they receive from the Navy Department. They complain that they get less from their American naval colleagues than reading the newspapers.

Especially has this complaint grown since the naval maneuvers in the Pacific. It came to a head at a meeting of naval attaches called by Vice Admiral Paul Yurevich Oras, of the Soviet Embassy, Dean of the corps of naval attaches.

As a result of the meeting the naval attaches gave a dinner to Admiral William H. Standley, chief of U. S. Naval Operations. The affair took place with considerable pomp and ceremony. It was held at Hotel Hamilton's swankiest wing. Three kinds of wine were served, with all the trimmings.

At the end, up popped Admiral Oras and launched upon a speech. Admiral Standley looked somewhat surprised but he listened.

He listened while Admiral Oras paid tribute to him, to the American Navy and to the United States. He listened especially to Admiral Oras' conclusion, which was:

"We only wish, Admiral Standley, that we could get a little more news about your excellent navy."

Admiral Standley's reply was brief. He said:

"I thought we were just coming here like sailors to dine and enjoy each other. I didn't know we were going to make speeches."

"Regarding more information about the American Navy, our policy is to give information with a string attached to it. We hold on to the string—so we can get a little information back."

BANDITS GET $50,000 IN 2 ROBBERIES

Chester, Pa. Bank Scene of First Holdup; $18,000 in Cash Taken

POLICE ON TRIAL

Oberlin College Office Robbed of $1,200

CHESTER, Pa., July 19.—Five armed desperadoes today invaded a branch office of the Delaware County National Bank, scooped up $48,000 in currency and escaped in a sedan bearing Delaware license plates.

Leaving one man parked at the wheel of their get-away car, the gunmen casually walked into the bank and up to the cashier's cage. Suddenly they drew pistols and threatened three clerks, the only occupants of the building located in the very center of the west-end industrial section.

With speed and precision, they gathered into satchels the currency, intended to meet neighborhood mill payrolls. After warning the victims that any outcry would result in gun play, the robbers dashed from the institution and leaped into their car.

The vehicle was last seen headed in the direction of Philadelphia.

OBERLIN, O., July 19.—A gang of three well-dressed gunmen today staged a raid on the Oberlin College treasurer's office in this staid college town and escaped with $1,200 in cash after menacing four clerks, three of them girls.

The three bandits fled north in a maroon-colored coupe, college officials reported to the sheriff's office at Elyria. Search for the bandit car was started immediately in Cleveland, Lorain, and Sandusky.

Two of the gunmen entered the treasury building on the campus, while the third waited outside in the automobile, the motor of which was kept running.

Ruth Rayburn and Martha Scott, two clerks, were in the outer office of the treasury department when the men appeared, one from a side door and the other from the front. The two girls were forced at the point of guns to enter the inner office where two other clerks, Glenora Sutfin and Vincent Hart, were working.

The four employees were forced to march into the vault, where the two robbers picked up the $1,200 in cash. The two then threatened to lock up the four in the vault, but Hart pleaded with them that there was no ventilation and that all four would be dead within 10 minutes.

GIRL'S BODY FOUND STUFFED IN SEWER

CHICAGO, July 19.—One man was in custody and a prisoner at the state prison at Joliet was to be questioned today, as police sought to solve the murder of 17-year-old Marion Cozzo, whose body was found stuffed in a sewer catch basin yesterday.

The body was identified last night by a friend of the girl.

The girl disappeared on the night of Dec. 1, 1934, her family said, and apparently the body had been in the sewer since that time, police said.

Anthony Cozzo, a brother of the girl, told police his sister had a date with Mills Redmond, 27, on the night she disappeared. Taken into custody, Redmond admitted knowing the girl but denied having a date with her that night. He presented an alibi which was being investigated today.

Bricker Ruling Hits School Board Members

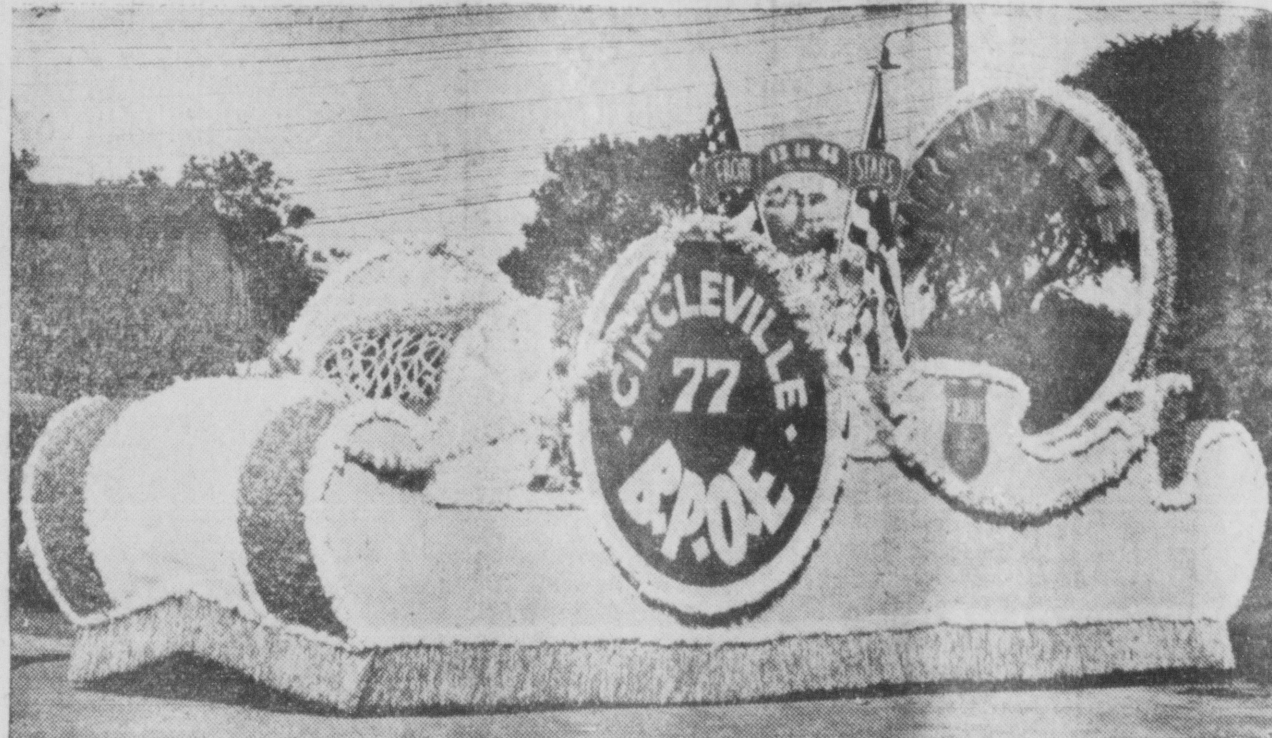

County and rural school board members in Pickaway-co are not entitled to $3.00 per day allowance for attending board meetings, Attorney General John W. Bricker ruled in effect today.

The question was raised by the Defiance prosecutor. Mr. Bricker said the legislature had failed to re-enact the statute providing for such payments to board members and said that under the existing Traxler-Keifer-Matthews bill there is no authority for such allowance to incumbent board members.

Hundreds of Circlevillians Brave Hot Sun to Witness Elks Parade Thursday

B. P. O. E. No. 77 had this beautiful entry in the parade.

Local Girl Overcome Watching Spectacle; Given First Aid.

Hundreds of Circlevillians mingled among the crowd of 150,000 which braved the hot sun in Columbus Thursday afternoon to witness the Elks parade—a spectacle of pageantry and beauty which required two hours to pass.

All agreed that it was the finest exhibition that has been seen on Columbus streets in a generation. One Circlevillian, Miss Regina Mack, N. Court st., became ill while watching the parade near the Desher-Wallick hotel and was removed to the state house grounds where she was given first aid.

Thirty-three floats, 42 bands and drum and bugle corps and 48 marching bodies containing about 15,000 persons were in the line of march of the colorful parade.

Local Elks Represented
Circleville's B. P. O. E. lodge No. 77 was represented in the parade with a beautiful float which is pictured above. On the float was a small sign, "Circleville—a Square City" and immediately above were two flags, one the emblem of the original 13 colonies containing 13 stars and another, the present 48-starred American flag.

West May Get Cabinet Post

Former Granville Congressman Slated to Be Secretary of Commerce, Report.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Charles West, Granville, former congressman from the Ohio 17th district, is headed for a place in President Roosevelt's cabinet, it was reliable reported here today.

West, who has been serving as the president's contact man, is believed to be the man Roosevelt intends to appoint to the $10,000 a year position as assistant secretary of commerce since the resignation of John Dickinson, Pennsylvania, left the post vacant.

There is a strong possibility that Daniel C. Roper may quit the cabinet post as secretary of commerce to succeed James A. Farley as postmaster general if Farley resigns this fall, observers suggested, and West, it was reported, would then undoubtedly be nominated for the commerce secretaryship.

GYPSIES ROB AGED FARMER

Marshall Cromley, Monroe Twp., Victim of Two Women 'Pick-pockets.'

Two women members of a band of gypsies which have been camping in Madison-co, robbed Marshall Cromley, aged Monroe-twp farmer, of $20 Thursday afternoon and escaped before the sheriff's office could be furnished a description of their car.

As a result Sheriff Charles Radcliff today declared war on gypsies coming into Pickaway-co and warned farmers not to rent the roving people land on which to camp.

The gypsies stopped at Mr. Cromley's home Thursday and asked for some nails. Before they left the premises, two of the women had 'picked' $20 from Mr. Cromley's pockets.

Sheriff Radcliff escorted a band of the gypsies out of the city Thursday morning, but has since learned that a number of them have been camping in Madison-co. "We intend to run these gypsies out of the county as fast as they come in, but the farmers will have to cooperate by refusing to rent them land," Sheriff Radcliff said.

GALLIPOLIS, July 19.—Sheriff's deputies today scoured the countryside in search of three gypsy women who last night fleeced John Snider, 94, Civil War veteran, of $300 as he sat in front of his farm home near Oak Hill.

Snider told officials the trio took his money and fled in a car with two men toward Ironton.

FACE LOSS OF AUG. RELIEF

Pickaway-Co May Be Cut Off From Direct Relief Next Month, Claim.

Charles C. Stillman, Federal Relief Administrator for Ohio announced today that the budget committee working on direct relief allotments for August has thus far refused to set a tentative figure for Pickaway-co.

Dayton Frost, chairman of the budget committee said that Pick-away-co was not in need of relief funds as badly as some of the other counties and that there was a possibility that no allotment for direct relief will be made to Pickaway-co for the month of August.

Mr. Frost said he expected that Works Progress Administration projects would absorb the great majority of persons on relief rolls in Pickaway-co. Tentative relief budgets for numerous counties were made today by the budget committee all showing a slash of from 50 to 60 per cent over the July figures.

ROTARIANS HEAR COACH

Elmer E. Reger, Athletic Director at Circleville High School, Speaks.

Rotarians had the opportunity of getting acquainted with Elmer E. Reger, the new coach at the Circleville high school, when he spoke before the club Thursday noon on "Athletics and Physical Education Benefits."

"Athletics, particularly football, in addition to physical exercise, is good for general education for those who participate," he said. "A player must learn the rules, be able to interpret them and when in the game must be able to think fast and make the best of the different situations."

Athletics is a practical laboratory for the student, Reger continued, pointing out that it tends to build character, teach team work and calls for self-sacrifice.

The coach stated that too much emphasis is being put on varsity athletics. He believes that an intramural program should be instituted in schools so that all students have an opportunity to participate and receive the benefits that athletics give.

Germany Plans to Drive Jews Back in Old Ghettos

BERLIN, July 19.—A new boycott against the Jewish shop-owners of Germany was instituted today under the militant leadership of Julius Streicher, arch-priest of anti-Semitism whose followers seek to drive all of German Jewry into ghettos.

With Streicher's bitter anti-Semitic publication "Der Stuermer" as their Bible and guide-book, scores of his radical henchmen covered the city plastering signs on the walls of neighborhood Jewish shops which read:

"He who buys from Jews is a traitor!" The boycott campaign opened with gusto, indicating Streicher may be trying to duplicate the great national boycott of all Jewish business which was launched soon after Hitler came to

GAS COMPANY, COUNCIL MAY COMPROMISE

Concession Made in Chillicothe Offer May be Presented Here

WILLING TO TALK

Jay Says Company Will Discuss With Council

Indications that the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and city council may get together on a rate schedule for Circleville were expressed today by Harold M. Jay, district manager of the company, who Thursday made a concession in a rate offered to Chillicothe.

The concession made to the Ross-co city is in the form of a lopping off of the fifth year rate step-up which was contained in a proposal offered Chillicothe council some weeks ago.

Circleville council has been at odds with the gas company for some time. It has in the meantime passed an ordinance offered by the Universal Pipe Line Co. guaranteeing the delivery of gas to the city at a 45 cent rate.

To date, the Universal Co. has taken no steps to supply the gas.

Jay Makes Statement
In a statement to The Herald today, Mr. Jay said he believed the gas company and local city council could agree on some satisfactory rate and that the company would be willing to meet with members of council any time.

The new schedule offered Chillicothe is the same one which was accepted by Laurelville with the fifth year increase lopped off. The gas company accepted this and indicated that it would do the same for Chillicothe.

Circleville and Chillicothe are now paying the same rate, an average of 73.88 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. Persons using more than 5,000 cubic feet monthly would benefit from the concession made by the gas company.

"We have felt that the Circleville people have been very fair in their attitude toward us and we believe that our differences can be easily settled," Jay said today.

SLAYER GETS LIFE TERM

Merton Goodrich, Killer of 11-Year-Old Girl, Changes Plea to 'Guilty.'

DETROIT, July 19.—Merton Ward Goodrich today interrupted his fantastic trial and pleaded guilty to the "heinous" murder of Lillian Gallahee, 11.

Judge Henry S. Sweeney immediately sentenced him to life imprisonment. "Fine," said Goodrich, "That's what I expected. Sure, I expected life."

After accepting the guilty plea while interrupted the fantastic and useless trial, upon which Goodrich had insisted, Judge Sweeney remarked that he would "have had to take the case out of the jury's hands anyway and direct a verdict of guilty."

Goodrich's apparent determination to cause the law all the trouble possible, collapsed when he realized that he would have to take the witness stand himself and tell how he slugged and strangled the Detroit school girl, assaulted her, and hid her trussed and mutilated body in a trunk in his apartment.

U. S. OPPOSES AMERICAN AID IN ITALY WAR

State Department Points to Heavy Penalty for Citizens Enlisting

STATIONS SET UP

Volunteers Recruiting in New York, Officials Say

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The State Department is definitely opposed to American citizens enlisting in the armies of either Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia or Italy.

Furthermore, any American who enlists in this country or anyone who seeks to recruit volunteers in this country for either Ethiopia or Italy is liable to three years' imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

This was learned at the State Department today as officials became concerned over reports that recruiting stations were being established in New York and other cities to enlist volunteers for Ethiopia, as well as Paris reports that efforts were being made there to enlist a group of American civilian aviators in the service of the black African kingdom.

Justice Department Watching
Insofar as recruiting in this country is concerned, the State Department considers it a matter for the Justice Department to handle. It has not yet considered the situation serious enough to call that department's attention to it, but assumes that justice officials are watching the matter.

However, the penalty governing enlistment or recruiting of American citizens in foreign armies applies only to territory under American jurisdiction. Americans abroad are free to enlist providing they do not take an oath of allegiance to a foreign sovereign or government. In that event, they automatically lost their citizenship.

However, the State Department is opposed to Americans enlisting in foreign armies at war or in danger of going to war irrespective of whether or not they take a foreign oath of allegiance.

Therefore, if there is any serious attempt by Americans abroad to enlist or offer their services in either the Ethiopian or Italian forces, the State Department will instruct the American embassies and legations in Europe to refrain from facilitating the travel of such citizens.

WASHINGTON C. H. ASKS REHEARING

Validity of Contract With Water Company is Questioned In Appeal.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—City of Washington C. H. applied to the state utilities commission today for a rehearing on the order of June 15 which authorized the Ohio Water company to discontinue water to fire hydrants.

The city denied the validity of the commission's finding because no contract existed. The right of the commission to act was also questioned because the city charged that validity of a contract purported to supply the city with fire protection, was still before the courts.

Officials of the city of Circleville, which is indebted to the water company, must appear before the commission in August to answer a similar complaint filed by the water company.

Germany Fights Religionists

Catholics and Protestants Face Loss of Privileges as Goering Opens Drive.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Third Reich today opened fire on Protestant churches which it believes have been conducting "a subversive political campaign against the state" with a warning that yesterday's drastic decree against Catholic activities also would be applied against them.

The warning was carried in inspired front-page stories appearing in the Essen National Zeitung, owned by Prussian Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering, the man who issued yesterday's orders against "Political Catholicism" in his capacity as head of the Reich's secret police.

Yesterday's decree, said the paper, was not directed solely against the Catholics. Severe measures also are "imminent" against "the subversive political campaign going on against the state in Protestant churches."

"The state is carefully watching hostile developments there, and will use all its power to maintain order," the paper continued.

Implying the united front of Protestant churches was operating against the state, the Zeitung declared Protestant Bishop Meiser of Munich had sent a letter to Gen. Goering protesting against his church speech at Hesseberg June 23.

This was a parallel to a protest made against a speech by Edward Rosenberg, head of the Nazi foreign department, by the Catholic Bishop of Munster.

Meanwhile, as the first step in applying the Goering decree to Catholic church papers, a publishing plant at Munster was raided and confiscated because its editors had allegedly attacked the Nazi regime and specifically Dr. Rosenberg.

Salad Salutes

Refreshingly crisp on a hot day is the salad course, or a whole meal built around the salad. A meat salad is more tempting than a roast when the temperature makes thoughts of oven cooking uninteresting.

A suitable salad for luncheon, dinner or for the later evening buffet, is Corned Beef in Aspic Jelly. Here is the recipe if you wish to make it.

Corned Beef in Aspic Jelly

- 1 can corned beef
- 1 pkg. aspic flavored gelatin
- 1 C. boiling water
- 1 Tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 1/2 tsp. tobacco sauce
- 1 C. cold water

Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water and add to the cold water, lemon juice and tobacco sauce. Chill until the gelatin begins to thicken, but not until it is set. Remove the corned beef from the can and cut in 1/2-inch slices. Arrange layers of aspic and slices of corned beef in a rectangular mold. Chill until firm.

Garden Salad

Garden salad is a favorite with men and very attractively served on your table from a wooden chop bowl, using your wooden salad servers appropriately. Let the guests help themselves from this bowl. They will be highly pleased with their hostess' thoughtfulness.

Rub the bowl with a bit of cut garlic. Slice, but do not peel, 1 cupful of small scarlet radishes very thin. Shred 1/2 cup of celery. Coarsely grate or slice and quarter one or two carrots. Shred 2 table-spoons of green pepper, thinly slice 1 cupful of pared cucumbers and add a grating or two of green onion. Toss all lightly and mix with French or Spanish dressing. Garnish the salad bowl with lettuce and just before serving add 1 cupful of shredded lettuce hearts to the salad. This salad is well liked with an oil and vinegar dressing for tartness.

A cooling dessert type of salad is Frozen Pineapple Salad. Use these ingredients:

Frozen Pineapple Salad

- 1 tsp. granulated gelatin
- 2 Tbsp. cold water
- 2 pks. cream cheese
- 3 Tbsp. cooked salad dressing
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. paprika
- 2 drops Worcestershire sauce
- 1 C. crushed drained pineapple
- 1/2 C. whipped cream

Soften gelatin in cold water, set over hot water and stir until dissolved. Combine cheese, salad dressing and seasonings. Add pineapple and gelatin, and mix thoroughly. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into refrigerator tray and chill until set, or pack in ice and salt and let stand until frozen. Cut into squares and serve on lettuce with French dressing.

NEWSMAN DROWNS

LIMA, July 19.—Coroner Harry Lewis returned a verdict of accidental death today in the case of Arthur Kurber, 24, Delphos newspaperman, who drowned while swimming in the Auglaize river.

Washington Merry-go-round

in the presidential ambitions widely ascribed to him.

The squat, Windsor tie-wearing Nebraskan is an ardent foe of the Tennessee Valley power development. His agents have been going over TVA files with a fine-tooth comb, looking for something to complain about.

When the TVA bill was before the House Military Affairs Committee, McCarl recommended that its expenditures be put under his jurisdiction. At present it is one of the few government agencies exempt.

The Administration vehemently opposed this demand. Roosevelt feared it would have made McCarl the real boss of the project. But a combination of Old Guard Democrats and Republicans, led by Andrew J. May, Dem.—Ky., Charles Faddis, Dem.—Pa., and Charles Plumley, Rep.—Tl., amended the bill to give McCarl this power.

Enactment of the provision would have skyrocketed McCarl's presidential stock. It would have put him in the fore-front as anti-New Deal champion.

But the House, uneasy over possible political repercussions as a result of its rejection of the "death sentence" clause in the President's Holding Company Bill, went pro-Administration in a big way.

By overwhelming majorities, it rebuffed both the Military Affairs Committee and McCarl. It restored the bill to practically the same form as put through the Senate by TVA's father, veteran Senator George Norris.

Merry-Go-Round

The great New York banking houses of J. P. Morgan and Kuhn,

Loeb, once stellar performers before the Senate banking investigation, are slated for another Washington appearance. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate committee investigating railroad finances, expects to summon the two mighty banking firms for public interrogation. Both are leading railroad fiscal agents. . . . Reports are reaching Republican circles in Washington that bitter undercover warfare has broken out between California's burly, bald Governor Frank Merriam and Hoover forces in the State. Merriam is said to be after the National Committeeship now held by Mark L. Regua, close friend of the former President. The Hoover faction is reported to be accusing Merriam of having his eye on capturing the State's delegation to the 1936 convention.

Kentucky's Representative Andrew J. May, violent critic of TVA expenditures, has his wife on his congressional payroll at a $3,600-a-year salary. . . . The Public Health Service has applied for a $3,450,000 allotment for Work-Relief funds to make a national survey of diseases. Chief on the list are infantile paralysis, arthritis, heart disease, kidney maladies and cancer.

North Carolina Is the Latest State To Change.

By International News Service
RALEIGH, N. C.—The first lethal execution in this state is scheduled to take place Aug. 28, when Edward Hester, 19-year-old Gaston-co resident, goes to his death in the gas chamber.

Hester was the first person sentenced under North Carolina's new law, passed by the recent state legislature, which provides substitution of gas for the electric chair.

The youth was convicted of the ax murder of Paul Honeycutt, a fellow convict at the state penitentiary where he was serving a 25-year sentence for the slaying of his brother-in-law who was killed last January.

North Carolina is one of several states to adopt lethal gas execution this year.

HOW FAR?

A FAMILIAR pattern is being drawn in the events that center at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. A remote spot, ordinarily unimportant. Few of those you meet on the street have ever been there or ever expect to be. No one cares much about the climate or how its people live. In other words, Addis Ababa might go on to the end of time and we'd never know it.

Yet back in 1914 there was another place many of us had never heard about — Sarajevo. Something happened there — the murder of an archduke — and you know the rest. A place that didn't matter became the focal point of the whole world, an event that there was the cause of a war that all but wrecked civilization.

Consider what is happening now. Events and threatened events at Addis Ababa, are having their effect around the world.

Mussolini shakes his fist. The Ethiopians stand their ground. Diplomatic agents dash around Europe. Parliaments become engrossed in debate. Economic blockades are talked of, battles reported. There is talk of sanctions, threats softened by the glove of diplomacy, a call for help to the United States. Almost, armies can be heard on the march. The waves in the ocean of world events spread out in circles ever widening, from the stones tossed across North Africa by a bloodthirsty dictator.

The makings of another World war? Not so preposterous, is it, when you consider how embroilments have come about in the past? The world may err sadly if it takes too much for granted. Italy's contemplated war on Ethiopia is set for some two months off. They must be months in which civilization must seek to utilize all the instrumentalities to minimize the war and prevent it that it has set up since the greatest war of all history. Even these may not suffice if the will to peace is not there.

REDUCING CRIME BILL

IT IS gratifying to find Attorney General Cummings maintaining his vigorous offense on "lawyer-criminals" in connivance with the underworld.

"Whenever it is possible for the federal power to reach members of the bar who are equally guilty with criminals themselves," says Mr. Cummings, "we intend to reach them. I think the people of the United States are in favor of that program."

The latter, surely, is a safe assumption. Law abiding citizens of the United States are well aware that organized crime is costing them more than a billion dollars annually, and they can be counted upon to approve removal of its irregular and unethical legal sanctions.

Federal agents have been making things hot for arch-criminals. And now that the same pressure is being directed against faithless legalists, prospects are bright for steady reduction of the crime bill that has been exacting such heavy tribute from society.

A professional critic is a person who thinks every artist's success due to the dumbness of the public.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

MASTERING BRIDGE (5)

ASIDE FROM the honor tricks and trump tricks of the two players becoming declarer and dummy, high honors possess another sort of value with which every player must become familiar. "Quick tricks" are the average defensive values of high honors, ordinarily capable of winning tricks against trump calls before either declarer or dummy can trump leads of the suit to which these honors belong.

Half the time one member or the other of the declaring side can trump the third lead of a suit containing only 3 cards. Therefore only honors capable of winning first or second round tricks can be considered "quick tricks". These defensive values are as follows: A-K, 2 tricks; A-Q, 1½ tricks; Ace, 1 trick; K-Q, one trick; K-X (symbolizing a guarded K), ½ trick. An average deal distributes only a trifle more than 7 quick tricks to the four players.

In an attempt to be different from others or to simplify the subject of card values, some authors have given a single table of honor values, supposed to be useful for both offensive and defensive purposes. Of course this is an error, as the offensive values of honors always are half again as great as their normal values, while their defensive values are less than normal.

Every practical player is interested in facts. Here are some of them. The doubton A-K (no smaller cards) has 9 in 10 chances to win a second defensive trick; the trebleton A-K-Q has 85 in 100 chances to win a second defensive trick, but a 4-card suit affords only 3 in 4 chances to win a second defensive trick. While an average deal distributes only 7 quick tricks about the table, there will be 15 honor tricks so distributed, and the total number of probable tricks, with each player considering his own best call, will be 20 in number.

When played at a suit call there average to be won 6 tricks with trumps and the remaining 7 tricks with high honors of side suits, again impressing upon players how seldom more than 2 defensive tricks may be won. This is strongly emphasized by the knowledge that a strong declaring side is the one to win the majority of the seven side suits taken by high honors. Half the hands dealt should give one side or the other a game. The average defensive strength of the defenders is only 2½ tricks. Think these things over before depending upon any table of honor tricks for defensive purposes.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 38

VAL WENT swiftly through the house in search of his wife. Garenne had come to join him and they finally returned to the bedroom to stare at each other with growing apprehension. As his eyes darted about summing up the situation Val saw that the fringed shade was missing. An uncovered box with the powder spilled out as if used hastily stood on top of the dressing table. The noise he had heard when he had first gone in to talk to Garenne must have been caused by the task of perfume that had been knocked to the floor. It still lay there with the loosened stopper slowly dripping its contents into the carpet.

Where could the girl have gone? She had no close friends. If she had sought refuge at Sue's and found no one at home, she surely would have returned by this time.

"Her purse is there in the drawer," he told Garenne, "and she could not have ventured far in the clothes she was wearing."

The man's eyes avoided his. "I think she hasn't gone far," he snapped.

"Do you know where she is?" Val demanded.

The man shrugged. "She has probably gone to Cordray," he answered shortly.

"What makes you say that?"

"She is very friendly with the man," he held out a restraining hand as Val swung toward the door. "Mind," he called hastily, "I make no accusations. Only see that the slate is clean if you really intend to make a fresh start with her."

Val's face darkened. When Lia knew he would not take her away, had she turned to Cordray? "If that is where she is," he said, "I can settle all this very quickly."

Garenne broke in, "Think it over for a bit," he urged. "If Lia has any foolish notion of telling him the truth about herself, you may be sure she'll be sent home speedily enough. Remember you are an officer. No use involving yourself in an open quarrel with this fellow—in a scandal that might cause you trouble because of attending publicity—"

"I shan't do anything that can hang me for," Val assured him grimly. "But I must find Lia and bring her home. And while I am about it I shall see to it that, hereafter, Cordray lets my wife alone."

Val came out into a night that was hot and smoldering with the tangle of forest fires. The wind had died. Low, thick clouds closed in oppressively. Something electric, portentous, seemed to hang in the atmosphere, as the storm crouched waiting to strike. At the Yard gate the marine on duty gave him a smart salute. But the man's curious side-glance confirmed the young officer's suspicion that the sentry had marked Lia's strange attire and, perhaps, distraught manner when she had passed this way; and although Val longed to ask the chap what direction she had taken, he could not bring himself to it.

He walked quickly the short distance from the gate to the wall surrounding Cordray's grounds, then turned in at the main driveway and strode along the curving path to the entrance. Taki, the Japanese butler, answered his ring and greeted him with an indrawn breath of respect.

"Mr. Cordray just finish dressing Rootenant Preston," he said smilingly. "He is in studio. I tell him you are here."

"I'll come with you," Val replied shortly. He was puzzled when the man offered no opposition and seemed undisturbed. Surely if Lia were in the house he would have acted differently. And yet, where else could she have been for the last three-quarters of an hour?

The young man's mouth was a harsh line, his jaw was sternly set, but he was filled with uncertainty when Taki announced him. Cordray, an imposingly handsome figure in dinner clothes, was at the far end of the studio bending over a vase that held the block of wood he was fashioning into a mask. At the sound of Taki's voice he glanced up and hastily, then sent Val a cordial and unperturbed smile. "Hello, there, Preston," he called heartily. "This is nice of you to drop in. Have a good leave?"

"Very pleasant, thanks," Val's swift glance about the room had told him there were no other occupants. The Japanese had followed him through the door and stood waiting. Cordray kept on with his work. "Taki was just about to bring me a cocktail," he said. "Any particular kind you would like?"

"None for me. I wish to speak with you alone."

The man looked suddenly across at him and Val wondered whether he were stalling for time when he said, "Be with you in a minute. I'm just ironing out a line that has eluded me. I caught the right idea a while ago." He called to the butler, "Wait, Taki. Mr. Preston may change his mind. And I'm not sure but that I'd prefer a highball to a cocktail."

The Japanese remained by the door and Cordray went on talking. "During your leave, Preston," he said, "I hope you thought over that last chat of ours. I am trusting that you will, perhaps, reconsider your decision," he looked up smilingly from his work. "I am prepared to make you a very handsome offer for that invention of yours. Something you can't afford to turn down."

"I'm not interested," Val said tersely.

"Oh, come now," Cordray laughed, quirked the russet eyebrow. "Every man has his price."

"I haven't," Val turned suddenly to the butler. "Mr. Cordray will call you when he wants you," he snapped. "Get out!"

The man stared, then went quickly through the door and closed it behind him.

Cordray's eyes had narrowed. He said, "Well, really, old chap—"

Val strode down the room toward him. "Cordray," he said, "I want to know where my wife is."

"Mrs. Preston? But how on earth should I know?" The man's hard blue eyes widened in apparent amazement.

"You give me your word she hasn't been here within the last hour?"

"Of course she hasn't. But what has happened?"

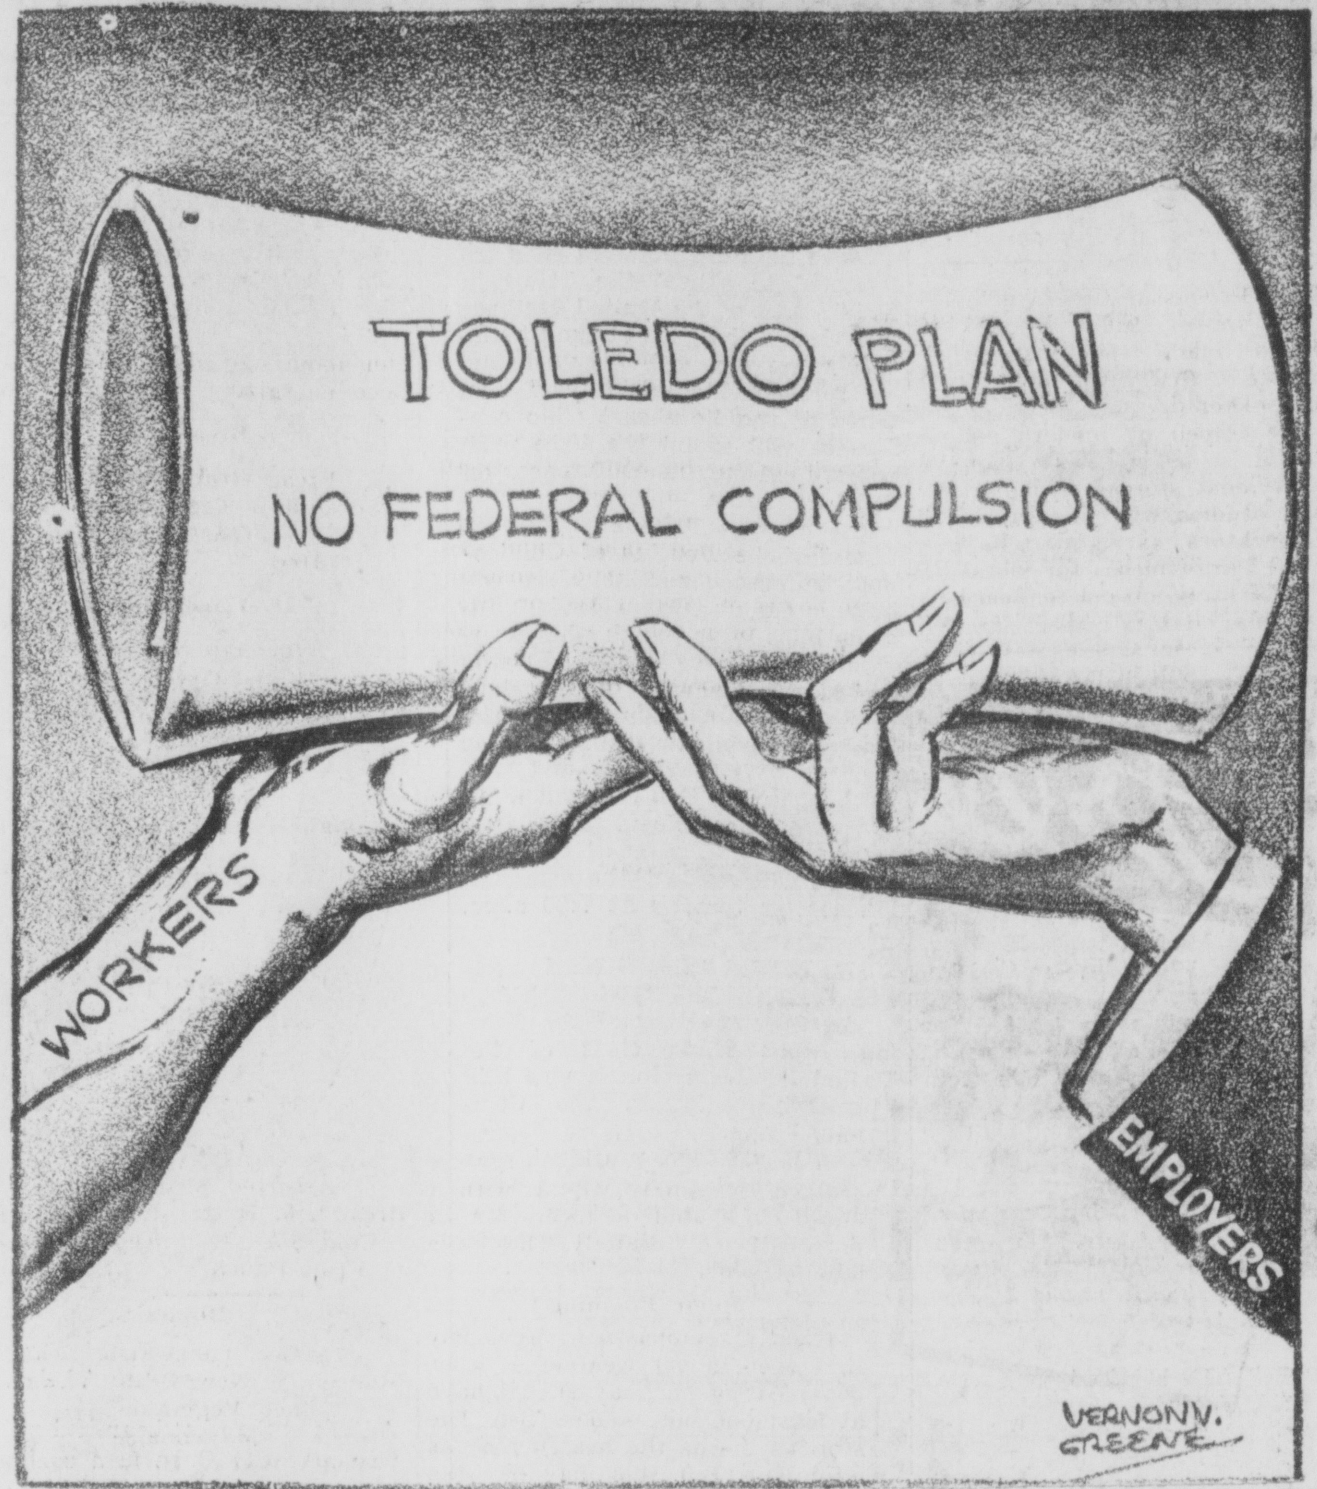

Val was silent for a moment. Finally he said, "All right, Cordray. We'll let it go at that. But I want you to understand you are to keep away from my wife! You are no longer welcome in my home! Is that clear?"

Cordray said indignantly, "Preston, don't be an ass! I admire Mrs. Preston. Of course I do. Why shouldn't I? She is an extremely and charming girl. But if you are hinting that I have any more than a casual friendship for her—you are insane. He wore a deeply affronted expression; his eyes met Val's squarely.

Treatment for Hay Fever Better Begun Immediately

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE DISCUSSION of the use of carbon dioxide in the treatment of hay fever, as outlined yesterday, reminds us that the hay fever season is approaching, and that if anyone wants to try immunological treatment he, or she, should begin immediately.

While successful immunological treatment has been reported even when begun as late as a week before the beginning of the season, it is better to begin at least a month or six weeks before, and some advocate an even longer period.

By immunological treatment, I mean the attempt to build up the immunity of the body against the pollens responsible for hay fever, by hypodermic injections of stronger and stronger extracts of the pollens responsible.

In order to make the treatment successful, it is first necessary to determine what pollen causes the attack in the particular individual patient. This is done by skin tests. A small amount of the pollen extracts are injected into the skin. A wheal naturally rises. If this becomes large and red and itchy the reaction is positive. It means that the pollen whose extract caused the wheal, is responsible for the hay fever. Besides the pollens it is well to try other substances in the same manner.

IT WAS A GOOD BRAND Doctor (to autoist who has been carried into his surgery after an accident): "Yes, you had a bad ner, because, as most hay fever victims know, certain foods will induce an attack in the season.

Cantaloupe Causes Attack I know one patient who will have an attack of hay fever during the summer. Another patient may be free from the symptoms of hay fever and be perfectly comfortable on a certain day of the season, perhaps because there is only a little pollen in the air; he eats a tomato and begins to sneeze. During the rest of the year when there is no hay fever, he can eat a tomato with perfect safety. It is all very queer, as most things about hay fever are.

The existence of these multiple sensitizations—unsuspected—is one of the reasons immunologic treatment of hay fever is often a failure. Most specialists in this type of treatment now try to discover whether their patients are sensitive to other substances than pollen.

The history of the attack also helps to identify the cause of hay fever. Most of our late summer hay fever comes from ragweed. Ragweed begins to shed its pollen about August 15, and if the attack begins on that day, it is almost certainly due to ragweed.

SALLY'S SALLIES

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

by R. J. SCOTT

Mrs. Geo. O. Thurn Recommends These Cool Cookery Recipes for Hot Weather

Use the Refrigerator More; Salads, Cool Beverages; and Dine on the Porch If Possible While Hot Weather Lasts.

Dear Friends in Circleville:
My recent visit to the New York shops made me realize more strongly than ever before, that housekeeping has been wonderfully helped by modern manufacturing. I began in the household equipment stores and departments and studied with joy the new refrigerators and ranges and the other large pieces for installation. Fortunately, no matter where I go in this country these same fine devices are on sale, for the good ones are the ones made by nationally known manufacturers and these manufacturers have distributed everywhere.

Then in the housekeeping departments of the big stores, the smaller but also important utensils caught my attention. Molds for making jellied salads and desserts; new salad sets consisting of bowls of clear glass, or bright pottery, or polished wood. In each case these bowls had a matching for the salad at the table becomes a distinguished rite.

New Glassware

Then new glassware for the serving of frozen desserts and iced beverages made me realize again how very important these foods are in the midsummer menu. Now such dishes and glassware are also found in your shops, and this year cheaper, it seems to me than in any previous year. If you can dine on the porch, buy these simple lacquered fabric table mat sets; they look like oil cloth, only they last longer, and the shine isn't quite so pronounced. They are cheap, are cleaned by simply wiping with a damp cloth, and do nicely for all porch service to family. They save laundry work!

Menu Planning

I have emphasized previously that even in hot weather at least one meal of the day should have at least one hot, cooked dish. The stomach needs the heated food as stimulant. But this may be the main dish of luncheon or supper, or it may be the breakfast. And for the most part the other meals may be salads, fresh fruits, vegetables, cold meats, cheese, fruit beverages, iced tea and iced coffee, with bread served now in place of the hot rolls and biscuits in demand in cooler weather. Here are typical menus for July days. Vary them to suit your markets and family tastes. Add a hearty main dish to the cold suppers if men and boys in the family are engaged in heavy work; or if children of the run about age play actively. Both need energizing, rebuilding foods.

Questions and Answers

Should water be very hot for after-exercise bath? Should rest accompany this type of bath?

After unaccustomed or violent exercise, take a hot bath. A hot bath is described as one taken in water at 98 to 110 degrees temperature. Remove dirt and perspiration thoroughly, then lie in the tub for 10 minutes keeping the water at an even temperature. Rinse with a warm water spray, rub briskly until dry and, if possible, go to bed for an hour or for the night.

How can I refinish my wooden sink so that I will not have so much difficulty in cleaning it?

Scrub thoroughly, then dry. Bleach wood if necessary. Again let dry. Pour some linseed oil on the wood and with a clean, soft cloth rub it in evenly until the wood has absorbed all the oil. Let dry for a day or two, then repeat the treatment several times until the oil has permeated the wood. If continued once a week for several weeks, a permanent finish will be secured, nice polish will result and the grain of the wood will show. All cloths used should be burned immediately to avoid danger of spontaneous combustion.

I have heard of a recipe for sherbet in which buttermilk is used and which is made in an automatic refrigerator. Do you know how this is made and what proportions are used?

Here is a buttermilk sherbet particularly popular because of the pineapple flavoring used.

Buttermilk Sherbet

2 C. buttermilk
1/2 C. sugar
1 C. crushed pineapple
1 egg white, unbeaten
1 1/2 tsp. vanilla

Combine buttermilk, sugar and pineapple thoroughly. Place in tray in chilling unit and freeze to a mush. Remove from tray to bowl; add egg white and vanilla. Beat until light and fluffy. Return to chilling unit and continue freezing.

What is Russian tea? Is it a different brand of tea?

Russian tea is generally described as a method of serving tea. It is served hot in a glass with cloves in lemon slices for flavoring. A true Russian would serve it sweetened with a spoonful of preserves.

Is it possible to whip coffee cream successfully?

Single cream or coffee weight cream may be whipped readily enough for most purposes without adding any other material to it. Use a straight sided container, such as a fruit jar, with a mouth wide enough for inserting an egg beater. Chill the cream thoroughly, allowing it to chill 24 hours, if possible. Then whip it in the chilled jar.

The proposition to levy a tax for the purpose of redistributing wealth is open to every criticism which can be levied against the burglar or the highwayman. Ex-Senator James Reed of Missouri.

Recipes For July Menus

To make the veal and ham croquettes called for in the menus, use one cup thick white sauce; one tablespoon onion juice; one half teaspoon salt; one eighth teaspoon pepper; one eighth teaspoon paprika; two cups minced cooked veal; one half cup minced cooked ham. Add seasonings and meat to the cooked white sauce. Spread on a plate to chill. Then shape, dip in crumbs and egg, then crumbs again and fry in deep hot fat. When delicately brown, drain on paper toweling.

Welsh Rarebit

One pound American cheese, dry as possible; one tablespoon butter; two teaspoons salt; two teaspoons dry mustard; one can thick tomato soup; slices of toast.

Shred the cheese with a fork. Melt the butter, stir in the seasoning and add the cheese, and let stand over boiling water until melted. Stir occasionally. Then gradually add the tomato soup and cook until the texture is smooth. Pour at once over the hot toast.

Creamed Dried Beef

One fourth pound dried beef, three tablespoons butter; three tablespoons flour; two cups milk, a little pepper.

Tear the beef into small pieces. Melt the butter in a saucepan and cook the beef in it a few minutes. Sprinkle with the flour, stir well, add the milk slowly, and stir until it boils. Let boil two minutes then season and serve.

Spaghetti, Italian Sauce

One box spaghetti; one fourth pound salt pork; one clove garlic; one tablespoon olive oil; two medium sized onions, minced; one cup canned mushrooms or fresh ones; one fourth cup parsley, minced; one half cup cooked tomatoes drained of all juice; one cup bouillon; two tablespoons sugar; one half teaspoon salt; one fourth teaspoon pepper; one fourth teaspoon paprika.

Cook spaghetti in salted boiling water until tender, about seven minutes. Drain. Add salt pork cut into very fine pieces, to the clove of garlic and the oil and fry until light brown. Remove garlic. Add minced onions, mushrooms and parsley and cook together three minutes. Add the tomato paste and bouillon and cook five minutes. Season with the salt, pepper, and paprika, and add sugar. Serve with drained spaghetti.

Warning to Tenants

Lion Keeps Men Under Car

KAKAMAS, Cape Colony.—Chased by a wounded lion, two farmers hunting in the Kalahari narrowly escaped death by flinging themselves under their motor-car. For 15 minutes the hunters lay quaking under the car until the lion withdrew. Then they crept out and shot him dead.

Boy Sucked into Pipe

BERLIN.—A 7-year-old boy was sucked into the accidentally opened waste pipe of a winding pool for children in Hamburg and washed through it over a distance of 900 feet to a neighboring lake where he was rescued. The pipe was only three feet in diameter. He was found to be suffering from nothing worse than a slight cut in the head.

ALEX MORRISON says:

Players in the habit of gripping the club on the very end waste about ten strokes per round. I have a pupil who stubbornly held to this practice. Only the other day did I get him to hold his iron clubs two or three inches down from the end.

The long hold made him wild on his second shots. He would take three or four shots to get on the green on an easy par four hole. He didn't have complete control of the club and invariably would look up before impact.

As soon as he adopted the short hold his swing became smoother. He had plenty of wrist action and felt that he had full control of the club. He had no trouble putting his second shots on the green. Many of them stopped close enough to the pin to afford him a putt for a birdie. It cut 15 strokes off his regular game.

It will help your game. Take a shorter hold on all of your clubs. The average in both distance and direction will be better than you've ever had before.

Lose Many Veterans

Come to think of it the football game scheduled this fall between the Red and Black and Chillicothe might be a real game after all despite the fact that Circleville will have a new coach and but little material—Chillicothe too, has only four lettermen they being Jim Strausbaugh, a plenty good boy, Lynch, Thompson, and Elliott.

BRADDOCK GIVES COLUMBUS FIGHT FANS EXHIBITION

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Fight fans from the capital city had a taste today of the famed left-hand which carried James J. Braddock from the nation's relief rolls to heavyweight champion within the span of one year.

Braddock, in a three-round exhibition yesterday against Jack McCarthy, stepped through the bout showing a fast left which had the Boston fighter slightly bewildered at times.

Braddock, not a heavy puncher, appeared to be pulling his punches after hitting McCarthy almost at will.

Orrville to take over the coaching duties, has everything to gain and nothing to lose—Last year's team scored only one touchdown, so by tallying two touchdowns this year the team will be 100 per cent improved over last year—Lancaster is not in the schedule, so you motorists needn't worry about getting rotten-egged on the way to and from the game—The schedule promises to be interesting with Chillicothe coming on the tail end of the list.

CBL Opens Oct. 4

The Central Buckeye league schedule opens October 4, less than a month after school starts, with Grandview coming here for a real early season test.

Bexley Makes Money

We read with interest the other evening that Bexley made money on basketball and football with the former sport leading—We often wonder just how much the local high school athletic association makes on its games—It's probably better that the records for the last few years be undisclosed.

We'd advise you embryo football players to start getting into condition—Coach Reger will be coming along one of these days to start drills so it will be a good idea for you to become hardened as early as possible.

BIRDS NEAR TOP IN AA STANDINGS

Win Over Minneapolis as Mike Ryba Hurls 12th Victory of Season.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Columbus and Indianapolis were one game nearer to the top of the American Association standings by virtue of the Red Birds 5 to 1 victory over the league-leading Minneapolis Millers and the Indians' 5 to 4 win over Milwaukee. The Indians remained in second place, four and one-half games removed from the leaders, while Columbus rested in third.

Paced by Mike Ryba, handy-armed man of the Red Birds, who captured his twelfth victory of the season, the Birds hit three Miller hurlers for 10 hits. Ryba allowed the pace-setters four safe blows.

Jack Tising, ace moundman of the Louisville Colonels, hurled five-hit ball and fanned 11 batters to give the Colonels an 8 to 2 victory over Kansas City.

With 30 players used by both teams, St. Paul took a wild affair from Toledo by setting the Hens back, 8 to 7. The Saints used three hurlers while the Hens called three pitchers to the box in a futile attempt for victory.

DEALERS MAY LOSE LIQUOR SIGNS FEAR

County Beer and Liquor Dispensers May Lose Out as Result of Board Ruling.

Vendors of beer and liquor in Pickaway-co now displaying signs given them; or leased to them by brewers may soon be ordered to remove these signs.

This development came today following a four-hour hearing before the Ohio Liquor Control Board, in Columbus Thursday, at which representatives of signmakers, brewers and permit holders were present.

Wellington T. Leonard, chairman of the board, explained that the "giving away of signs" is against the law. The Ohio Brewers' Association went on record opposing all signs and recommended their removal from places selling beer.

It also was learned that Alfred Humphrey, enforcement chief, had collected 150 affidavits to the effect that wholesalers and distributors had given away signs to permit holders.

The board deferred action on the matter until next week. It was considered likely however, that a regulation ordering the removal of signs would be made.

McNAUGHT VISITS

COLUMBUS, July 19.—S. P. McNaught, chairman of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, was a visitor at the Liquor Control department yesterday. He conferred briefly with Wellington Leonard, chairman of the Liquor Board. The subject of the conference was not disclosed but it was understood that Mr. McNaught had presented complaints of "bad taste and disorderly conduct in places selling liquor."

Mr. Leonard, it was understood, promised an immediate investigation.

SURVEY HITS USE OF MESSENGERS

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The Ohio Government Survey today attacked the "hit-and-miss" system of communication, involving telephone, mail and messenger service, in the various state departments.

The report, presented to Gov. Davey by Col. C. O. Sherrill, chairman of the survey, especially attacked the number of switchboards and private lines used by the different bureaus.

It recommended merger of switchboards to save the state $5,000 annually. It also urged the establishment of a centralized Mail and Messenger Bureau which could save the State $2,000 more per year over the present loosely organized system.

Detroit Checks Up on "Party Girls" After Confessions in Lawyer's Death

Widespread Racket Worked Against Male Visitors

By DANIEL L. WELLS
Central Press Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., July 20.—How many "party girls" operate in a city of around two million inhabitants, how do they work their racket, and how many victims are caught in their cleverly woven webs?

These questions, and scores of others, rushed through the minds of Detroiters recently, following the murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney.

Dickinson's body, shot through with two bullet holes, was found early one morning beside a lonely road in Detroit's River Rouge park. This park is a mecca for playseers by day, but a lonely place at night. It is 12 miles from the downtown section of the city.

Detroit Aghast

Detroit was aghast at the killing, and was more so when it was disclosed that three former burlesque dancers, and party girls, led by one man who was known in the minor underworld as a procurer and gambler, murdered this prominent man. The four, William Schweitzer, two sisters, Florence and Loretta Jackson, and Jean Miller, have confessed parts in the crime, and are before the courts of justice.

How did it occur that this conservative man, scion of one of the best families of New York, with a family living in his home on the Hudson river, could be lured to his death by such a group of people? This question was uppermost in most minds, as everyone read more and more of the murder details disclosed by confessions.

Here is the answer, from members of the hotel squad of the Detroit police.

Lieutenant Fred Shanahan of the hotel squad says that only approximately 25 such cases are reported to police each year. But it is more likely, he added, that at least 25 men are swindled by such women every week. And for every woman who gets her man, there probably are three who are trying but fail.

Few Lead to Violence

Few of the cases lead to a violent crime, the lieutenant believes, and fewer are reported to police because the men are afraid their relatives and friends may hear of it.

There are two accepted methods of "rolling" a man. In one, the victim loses his money in a so-called poker game. In the other, he drinks and drinks, until he becomes too drunk to know what is going on. Then his pockets are rifled. Or maybe he will drink some knockout drops. In either case, the robbers drink little; the victim drinks much.

Large Hotels "Best"

The game usually starts in a hotel lobby, dining room, or cocktail bar. The bigger and more fashionable the hotel, the better. For there is where the good spenders are to be found. The party girl looks attractive, is young, and is well dressed. When a lonely out-of-town business man tries to pick her up, she is friendly.

Lieutenant Shanahan explains: "These girls can spot a victim easily. Usually they pick someone who looks like a husband in town on business, but who is out for a good time in the evening. The girls don't appear to make the advances, but somehow they get into conversation with the man. The man may offer to buy a drink."

This, Lieutenant Shanahan remarks, is where the plot thickens. After they have had a few drinks, the girl mentions a girl friend.

The Man Falls Into Trap

Shanahan adds: "The man usually is a gentleman and suggests that the girl friend join them. The three get together and usually go to the apartment of the girl. Somehow this always is alluring to a man—going to a girl's apartment.

"The three start a poker game, and then the boy friend appears. He usually is an older man—to inspire confidence. He joins in the game, and the racket begins. The sucker puts up the money for his girl, but he soon finds the other three are all playing against him. They are card sharps, and—often resort to cheating to get their man."

Or the apartment visit mad develop into a one-sided drinking affair, with the sucker getting loaded drinks, the others ginger ale. The result is the same. The man amusement with sex appeal tie itself up with the liquor traffic."

Dr. J. Frank Norris, minister of the Temple Baptist church, scored it as a "new racket which, from coast to coast, preys upon guests in large hotels."

He asserted: "Whenever one of these vampires goes to one of the hotels, someone gets a rakeoff. It is time that we hold the hotel managers responsible."

Hull's Praise of Kellogg Past Meant to Allance Rebuff to Ethiopia

WASHINGTON — Foreign diplomats scratched their heads in bewilderment last week when Cordell Hull, who had turned thumbs down on Emperor Haile Selassie's appeal under the Kellogg Pact, suddenly reversed himself and came out with glowing praise of that Pact.

Three things were behind this: Mr. Hull's own naivete; a call by the British Ambassador; and a call by the French Ambassador.

Mr. Hull is a most altruistic gentleman. He neither believes in, nor understands, diplomatic innuendo. Reared in the mountains of Tennessee, accustomed to a vocabulary which would electrify the average diplomat, Mr. Hull did not appreciate all the interpretations placed upon his blunt note vetoing the Ethiopian appeal.

Therefore, when the French and British Ambassadors called upon him and reported that their governments felt he had deserted the Kellogg Pact, Mr. Hull was flabbergasted. He asked the two ambassadors to inform their governments that the United States by no means had deserted the Pact.

Then feeling that there still might be some apprehension, it was arranged that a friendly newspaperman should ask questions of Mr. Hull in press conference. In reply, Mr. Hull issued his second statement, praising the Kellogg Pact. However, he was careful not to mention either Ethiopia or Italy.

Net effect of Hull's two statements was that the United States took a new interest in the preservation of the Kellogg Pact but was prepared to do nothing about it.

Naval Information

Foreign naval attaches in Washington have become increasingly reticent over the amount of information they receive from the Navy Department. They complain that they get less from their American naval colleagues than reading the newspapers.

Especially has this complaint grown since the naval maneuvers in the Pacific. It came to a head at a meeting of naval attaches called by Vice Admiral Paul Yurevich Oran, of the Soviet Embassy, Dean of the corps of naval attaches.

As a result of the meeting the naval attaches gave a dinner to Admiral William H. Standley, chief of U. S. Naval Operations. The affair took place with considerable pomp and ceremony. It was held at a Washington swank hotel. Three kinds of wine were served, with all the trimmings.

At the end, up popped Admiral Oran and launched upon a speech. Admiral Standley looked somewhat surprised but he listened.

He listened while Admiral Oran paid tribute to him, to the American Navy and to the United States. He listened especially to Admiral Oran's conclusion, which was:

"We only wish, Admiral Standley, that we could get a little more news about your excellent navy."

Admiral Standley's reply was brief. He said:

"I thought we were just coming here like sailors to dine and enjoy each other. I didn't know we were going to make speeches."

"Regarding more information about the American Navy, our policy is to give information with a string attached to it. We hold on to the string so we can get a little information back."

BANDITS GET $50,000 IN 2 ROBBERIES

Chester, Pa. Bank Scene of First Holdup; $18,000 in Cash Taken

POLICE ON TRIAL

Oberlin College Office Robbed of $1,200

CHESTER, Pa., July 19.—Five armed desperadoes today invaded a branch office of the Delaware County National Bank, scooped up $48,000 in currency and escaped in a sedan bearing Delaware license plates.

Leaving one man parked at the wheel of their get-away car, the gunmen casually walked into the bank and up to the cashier's cage. Suddenly they drew pistols and threatened three clerks, the only occupants of the building located in the very center of the west-end industrial section.

With speed and precision, they gathered into satchels the currency, intended to meet neighborhood mill payrolls. After warning the victims that any outcry would result in gun play, the robbers dashed from the institution and leaped into their car.

The vehicle was last seen headed in the direction of Philadelphia.

OBERLIN, O., July 19.—A gang of three well-dressed gunmen today staged a raid on the Oberlin College treasurer's office in this state college town and escaped with $1,200 in cash after menacing four clerks, three of them girls.

The three bandits fled north in a maroon-colored coupe, college officials reported to the sheriff's office at Elyria. Search for the bandit car was started immediately in Cleveland, Lorain, and Sandusky.

Two of the gunmen entered the treasurer's building on the campus, while the third waited outside in the automobile, the motor of which was kept running.

Ruth Rayburn and Martha Scott, two clerks, were in the outer office of the treasury department when the men appeared, one from a side door and the other from the front. The two girls were forced at the point of guns to enter the inner office, where two other clerks, Glenola Sutton and Vincent Hart, were working.

The four employees were forced to march into the vault, where the two robbers picked up the $1,200 in cash. The two then threatened to lock up the four in the vault, but Hart pleaded with them that there was no ventilation and that all four would be dead within 10 minutes.

Then feeling that there still might be some apprehension, it was arranged that a friendly newspaperman should ask questions of Mr. Hull in press conference. In reply, Mr. Hull issued his second statement, praising the Kellogg Pact. However, he was careful not to mention either Ethiopia or Italy.

Net effect of Hull's two statements was that the United States took a new interest in the preservation of the Kellogg Pact but was prepared to do nothing about it.

GIRL'S BODY FOUND STUFFED IN SEWER

CHICAGO, July 19.—One man was in custody and a prisoner at the state prison at Joliet was to be questioned today, as police sought to solve the murder of 17-year-old Marion Cozzo, whose body was found stuffed in a sewer catch basin yesterday.

The body was identified last night by a friend of the girl.

The girl disappeared on the night of Dec. 1, 1934, her family said, and apparently the body had been in the sewer since that time, police said.

Anthony Cozzo, a brother of the girl, told police his sister had a date with Mills Redmond, 27, on the night she disappeared. Taken into custody, Redmond admitted knowing the girl but denied having a date with her that night. He presented an alibi which was being investigated today.

Bricker Ruling Hits School Board Members

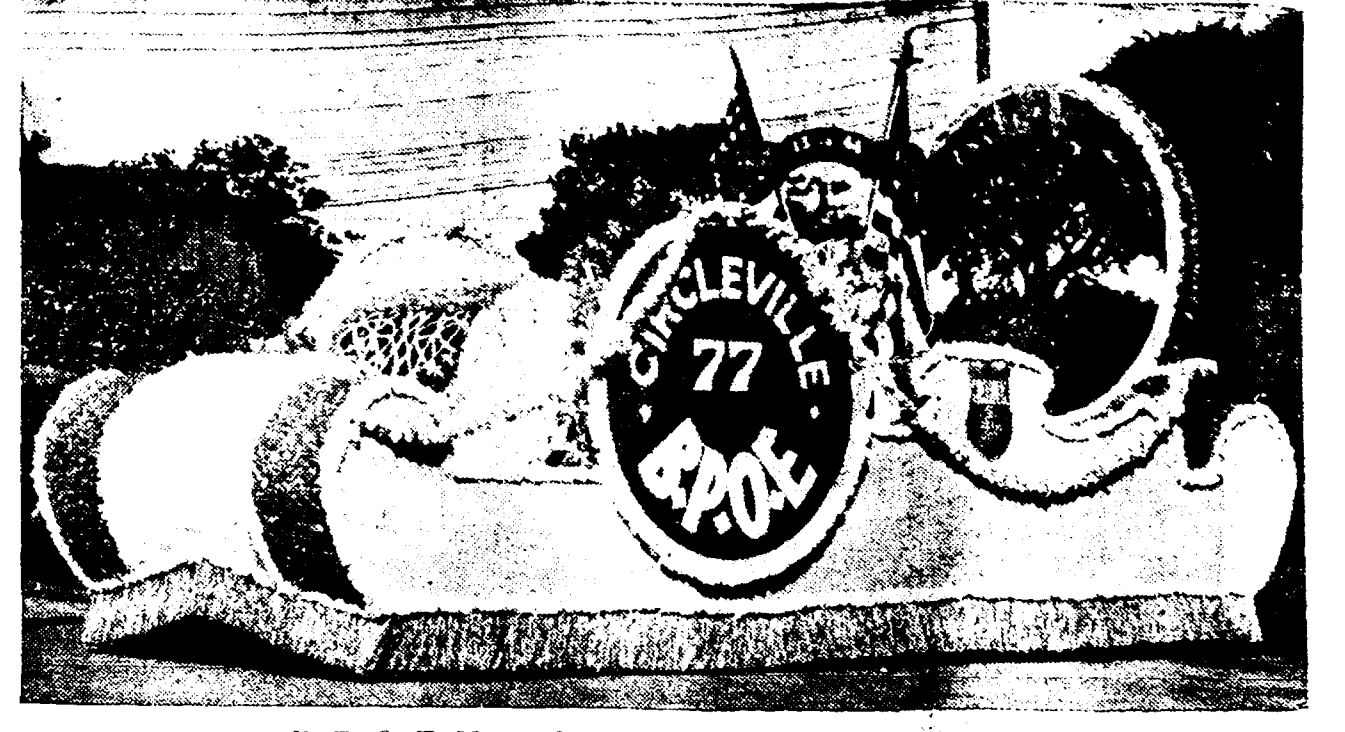

County and rural school board members in Pickaway-co are not entitled to $3.00 per day allowance for attending board meetings, Attorney General John W. Bricker ruled in effect today.

The question was raised by the De Graffenreid prosecution. Mr. Bricker said the legislature had failed to re-enact the statute providing for such payments to board members and said that under the existing Traxler-Koerber-McCabe bill there is no authority for such allowance to incumbent board members.

Hundreds of Circlevillians Brave Hot Sun to Witness Elks Parade Thursday

B. F. O. E. No. 77 had this beautiful entry in the parade.

Local Girl Overcome Watching Spectacle; Given First Aid.

Hundreds of Circlevillians mingled among the crowd of 150,000 which braved the hot sun in Columbus Thursday afternoon to witness the Elks parade—a spectacle of pageantry and beauty which required two hours to pass.

All agreed that it was the finest exhibition that has been seen on Columbus streets in a generation. One Circlevillian, Miss Regina Mack, N. Court-st., became ill while watching the parade near the Deshler-Wallack hotel and was removed to the state house grounds where she was given first aid.

Thirty-three floats, 42 bands and drum and bugle corps and 48 marching bodies containing about 15,000 persons were in the line of march of the colorful parade.

West May Get Cabinet Post

Former Granville Congressman Stated to Be Secretary of Commerce, Report.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Charles West, Granville, former congressman from the Ohio 17th district, is headed for a place in President Roosevelt's cabinet, it was reliable reported here today.

West, who has been serving as the president's contact man, is believed to be the man Roosevelt intends to appoint to the $10,000 a year position as assistant secretary of commerce since the resignation of John Dickinson, Pennsylvania, left the post vacant.

There is a strong possibility that Daniel C. Roper may quit the cabinet post as secretary of commerce to succeed James A. Farley as postmaster general if Farley resigns this fall, observers suggested, and West, it was reported, would then undoubtedly be nominated for the commerce secretaryship.

GAS COMPANY, COUNCIL MAY COMPROMISE

Concession Made in Chillicothe Offer May be Presented Here

WILLING TO TALK

Jay Says Company Will Discuss With Council

Indications that the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and city council may get together on a rate schedule for Circleville were expressed today by Harold M. Jay, district manager of the company, who Thursday made a concession in a rate offered to Chillicothe.

The concession made to the Ross-co city is in the form of a lopping off of the fifth year rate step-up which was contained in a proposal offered Chillicothe council some weeks ago.

Circleville council has been at odds with the gas company for some time. It has in the meantime passed an ordinance offered by the Universal Pipe Line Co. guaranteeing the delivery of gas to the city at a 45 cent rate.

To date, the Universal Co. has taken no steps to supply the gas.

Jay Makes Statement

In a statement to The Herald today, Mr. Jay said he believed the gas company and local city council could agree on some satisfactory rate and that the company would be willing to meet with members of council any time.

The new schedule offered Chillicothe is the same one which was accepted by Laurelville with the fifth year increase lopped off. The gas company accepted this and indicated that it would do the same for Chillicothe.

Circleville and Chillicothe are now paying the same rate, an average of 73.88 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. Persons using more than 5,000 cubic feet monthly would benefit from the concession made by the gas company.

"We have felt that the Circleville people have been very fair in their attitude toward us and we believe that our differences can be easily settled," Jay said today.

ROTARIANS HEAR COACH

Elmer E. Reger, Athletic Director at Circleville High School, Speaks.

Rotarians had the opportunity of getting acquainted with Elmer E. Reger, the new coach at the Circleville high school, when he spoke before the club Thursday noon on "Athletics and Physical Education Benefits."

"Athletics, particularly football, in addition to physical exercise, is good for general education for those who participate," he said. "A player must learn the rules, be able to interpret them and when in the game must be able to think fast and make the best of the different situations."

Athletics is a practical laboratory for the student, Reger continued, pointing out that it tends to build character, teach team work and calls for self-sacrifice.

The coach stated that too much emphasis is being put on varsity athletics. He believes that an intramural program should be instituted in schools so that all students have an opportunity to participate and receive the benefits that athletics give.

Germany Plans to Drive Jews Back in Old Ghettos

BERLIN, July 19.—A new boycott against the Jewish shop-owners of Germany was instituted today under the militant leadership of Julius Streicher, arch-priest of anti-Semitism, whose followers seek to drive all of German Jewry into ghettos.

With Streicher's bitter anti-Semitic publication "Der Stuermer" as their Bible and guide-book, scores of his racial henchmen covered the city plastering signs on the walls of neighborhood Jewish shops which read:

"He who buys from Jews is a traitor!"

The boycott campaign opened with gusto, indicating Streicher may be trying to duplicate the great national boycott of all Jewish business which was launched soon after Hitler came to power and which resulted in counter-boycotts all over the world.

The original boycott gradually died out, but in view of recent anti-Semitic drives all over the country, commencing this week in the racial beatings of Jews in streets in the heart of Berlin, it was not unlikely the new drive against Jewish shop-owners would develop into a boycott nearing the proportions of the first.

With officialdom backing up Streicher with orders in many towns, including Berlin, forbidding Jews to bathe in public baths frequently by "Aryans" and with the press presenting only one side of the anti-Semitic crisis, it appeared official Germany was trying to drive Jews back into ghettos such as existed in the middle ages.

After Mary Duke Biddle, heiress to Duke tobacco millions, went to Tulsa, Okla., in private car and visited the old swimming hole with plain Joe Trent, fellow student at Duke University, her mother denied a romance and named an easterner as a "good friend," but Tulsa wouldn't be surprised if Joe and Mary were more than "good friends."

No relief is in sight for several days according to weather observers. "Generally fair" is the prediction for tonight and Saturday.

SLAYER GETS LIFE TERM

Merton Goodrich, Killer of 11-Year-Old Girl, Changes Plea to 'Guilty.'

DETROIT, July 19.—Merton Ward Goodrich today interrupted his fantastic trial and pleaded guilty to the "heinous" murder of Lillian Galtner, 11.

Judge Henry S. Sweeney immediately sentenced him to life imprisonment.

"Fine," said Goodrich. "That's what I expected. Sure, I expected life."

After accepting the guilty plea while interrupted the fantastic and useless trial, upon which Goodrich had insisted, Judge Sweeney remarked that he would "have had to take the case out of the jury's hands anyway and direct a verdict of guilty."

Goodrich's apparent determination to cause the law all the trouble possible, collapsed when he realized that he would have to take the witness stand himself and tell how he slugged and strangled the Detroit school girl, assaulted her, and had her trussed and mutilated body in a trunk in his apartment.

U. S. OPPOSES AMERICAN AID IN ITALO WAR

State Department Points to Heavy Penalty for Citizens Enlisting

STATIONS SET UP

Volunteers Recruiting in New York, Officials Say

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The State Department is definitely opposed to American citizens enlisting in the armies of either Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia or Italy.

Furthermore, any American who enlists in this country or anyone who seeks to recruit volunteers in this country for either Ethiopia or Italy is liable to three years' imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

This was learned at the State Department today as officials became concerned over reports that recruiting stations were being established in New York and other cities to enlist volunteers for Ethiopia, as well as Paris reports that efforts were being made there to enlist a group of American civilian aviators in the service of the black African kingdom.

Justice Department Watching

Insofar as recruiting in this country is concerned, the State Department considers it a matter for the Justice Department to handle. It has not yet considered the situation serious enough to call that department's attention to it, but assumes that justice officials are watching the matter.

However, the penalty governing enlistment or recruiting of American citizens in foreign armies applies only to territory under American jurisdiction. Americans abroad are free to enlist providing they do not take an oath of allegiance to a foreign sovereign or government. In that event, they automatically lost their citizenship.

However, the State Department is opposed to Americans enlisting in foreign armies at war or in danger of going to war irrespective of whether or not they take a foreign oath of allegiance.

Therefore, if there is any serious attempt by Americans abroad to enlist or offer their services in either the Ethiopian or Italian forces, the State Department will instruct the American embassies and legations in Europe to refrain from facilitating the travel of such citizens.

WASHINGTON C. H. ASKS REHEARING

Validity of Contract With Water Company is Questioned In Appeal.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—City of Washington C. H. applied to the state utilities commission today for a rehearing on the order of June 18 which authorized the Ohio Water company to discontinue water to fire hydrants.

The city denied the validity of the commission's finding because no contract existed. The right of the commission to act was also questioned because the city charged that validity of a contract purported to supply the city with fire protection, was still before the courts.

Officials of the city of Circleville, which is indebted to the water company, must appear before the commission in August to answer a similar complaint filed by the water company.

CHANGE SALES TAX ALLOCATION AUG. 1

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The sales tax funds will be freed from allocations for poor relief and old age pensions by Aug. 1 and local subdivisions and schools will then receive more than twice as much per month State Auditor Joseph Tracy announced today.

The last allocation of funds for poor relief of 1,000 persons and administrative expenses under the present set-up will be made Aug. 1. It will amount to $2,235,000. With this payment out of the sales tax, the auditor's office will have ended the allocations, required by law for the other state services.

Germany Fights Religionists

Catholics and Protestants Face Loss of Privileges as Goering Opens Drive.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Third Reich today opened fire on Protestant churches which it believes have been conducting "a subversive political campaign against the state" with a warning that yesterday's drastic decree against Catholic activities also would be applied against them.

The warning was carried in inspired front-page stories appearing in the Essen National Zeitung, owned by Prussian Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering, the man who issued yesterday's orders against "Political Catholicism" in his capacity as head of the Reich's secret police.

Yesterday's decree, said the paper, was not directed solely against the Catholics. Severe measures also are "imminent" against the "subversive political campaign going on against the state in Protestant churches."

"The state is carefully watching hostile developments there, and will use all its power to maintain order," the paper continued. Implying the united front of Protestant churches was operating against the state, the Zeitung declared Protestant Bishop Meiser of Munich had sent a letter to Gen. Goering protesting against his church speech at Hesseberg June 23.

This was a parallel to a protest made against a speech by Edward Rosenberg, head of the Nazi foreign department, by the Catholic Bishop of Munster.

Meanwhile, as the first step in applying the Goering decree to Catholic church papers, a publishing plant at Munster was raided and confiscated because its editors had allegedly attacked the Nazi regime and specifically Dr. Rosenberg.

Salad Salutes

Refreshingly crisp on a hot day is the salad course, or a whole meal built around the salad. A meat salad is more tempting than a roast when the temperature makes thoughts of oven cooking uninteresting.

A suitable salad for luncheon, dinner or for the later evening buffet, is Corned Beef in Aspic Jelly. Here is the recipe if you wish to make it.

Corned Beef in Aspic Jelly

- 1 can corned beef
- 1 pkg. aspic flavored gelatin
- 1 C. boiling water
- 1 Tbsp. lemon juice
- 1/4 tsp. tobacco sauce
- 1 C. cold water

Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water and add to the cold water, lemon juice and tobacco sauce. Chill until the gelatin begins to thicken, but not until it is set. Remove the corned beef from the can and cut in 1/2-inch slices. Arrange layers of aspic and slices of corned beef in a rectangular mold. Chill until firm.

Garden Salad

Garden salad is a favorite with men and very attractively served on your table from a wooden chop bowl, using your wooden salad servers appropriately. Let the guests help themselves from this bowl. They will be highly pleased with their hostess' thoughtfulness.

Rub the bowl with a bit of cut garlic. Slice, but do not peel, 1 cupful of small scarlet radishes very thin. Shred 1/2 cup of celery. Coarsely grate or slice and quarter one or two carrots. Shred 2 table-spoons of green pepper, thinly slice 1 cupful of pared cucumbers and add a grating or two of green onion. Dress all lightly and mix with French or Spanish dressing. Garnish the salad bowl with lettuce and just before serving add 1 cupful of shredded lettuce hearts to the salad. This salad is well liked with an oil and vinegar dressing for tartness.

A cooling dessert type of salad is Frozen Pineapple Salad. Use these ingredients:

- Frozen Pineapple Salad
- 1 tsp. granulated gelatin
- 2 Tbsp. cold water
- 2 pkgs. cream cheese
- 3 Tbsp. cooked salad dressing
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. paprika
- 2 drops Worcestershire sauce
- 1 C. crushed drained pineapple
- 1/2 C. whipped cream

Soften gelatin in cold water, set over hot water and stir until dissolved. Combine cheese, salad dressing and seasonings. Add pineapple and gelatin, and mix thoroughly. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into refrigerator tray and chill until set, or pack in ice and salt and let stand until frozen. Cut into squares and serve on lettuce with French dressing.

In the presidential ambitions widely ascribed to him.

The squat, Windsor tie-wearing Nebraskan is an ardent foe of the Tennessee Valley power development. His agents have been going over TVA files with a fine-tooth comb, looking for something to complain about.

When the TVA bill was before the House Military Affairs Committee, McCarl recommended that its expenditures be put under his jurisdiction. At present it is one of the few government agencies exempt.

The Administration vehemently opposed this demand. Roosevelt feared it would have made McCarl the real boss of the project. But a combination of Old Guard Democrats and Republicans, led by Andrew J. May, Dem.—Ky., Charles Faddis, Dem.—Pa., and Charles Plumley, Rep.—Vt., amended the bill to give McCarl this power.

Enactment of the provision would have skyrocketed McCarl's presidential stock. It would have put him in the fore-front as anti-New Deal champion.

But the House, uneasy over possible political repercussions as a result of its rejection of the "death sentence" clause in the President's Holding Company Bill, went pro-Administration in a big way.

By overwhelming majorities, it rebuffed both the Military Affairs Committee and McCarl. It restored the bill to practically the same form as put through the Senate by TVA's father, veteran Senator George Norris.

Merry-Go-Round

The great New York banking houses of J. P. Morgan and Kuhn,

Loeb, once stellar performers before the Senate banking investigation, are slated for another Washington appearance. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate committee investigating railroad finances, expects to summon the two mighty banking firms for public interrogation. Both are leading railroad fiscal agents. . . . Reports are reaching Republican circles in Washington that bitter undercover warfare has broken out between California's burly, bald Governor Frank Merriam and Hoover forces in the State. Merriam is said to be after the National Committeemanship now held by Mark L. Requa, close friend of the former President. The Hoover faction is reported to be accusing Merriam of having his eye on capturing the State's delegation to the 1936 convention.

Kentucky's Representative Andrew J. May, violent critic of TVA expenditures, has his wife on his congressional payroll at a $3,600-a-year salary. . . . The Public Health Service has applied for a $3,450,000 allotment for Work-Relief funds to make a national survey of diseases. Chief on the list are infantile paralysis, arthritis, heart disease, kidney malady and cancer.

HOW FAR?

A FAMILIAR pattern is being drawn in the events that center at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. A remote spot, ordinarily unimportant. Few of those who meet on the street have ever been there or ever expect to be. No one cares much about the climate or how its people live. In other words, Addis Ababa might go on to the end of time and we'd never know it.

Yet back in 1914 there was another place many of us had never heard about — Sarajevo. Something happened there — the murder of an archduke — and you know the rest. A place that didn't matter became the focal point of the whole world, an event that there was the cause of a war that all but wrecked civilization.

Consider what is happening now. Events and threatened events at Addis Ababa, are having their effect around the world. Mussolini shakes his fist. The Ethiopians stand their ground. Diplomatic agents dash around Europe. Parliaments become engrossed in debate. Economic blockades are talked of, battles reported. There is talk of sanctions, threats softened by the glove of diplomacy, a call for help to the United States. Almost, armies can be heard on the march. The waves in the ocean of world events spread out in circles ever widening, from the stones tossed across North Africa by a bloodthirsty dictator.

The makings of another World war? Not so preposterous, is it, when you consider how embroilments have come about in the past? The world may err sadly if it takes too much for granted. Italy's contemplated war on Ethiopia is set for some two months off. They must be months in which civilization must seek to utilize all the instrumentalities to minimize the war and prevent it that it has set up since the greatest war of all history. Even these may not suffice if the will to peace is not there.

REDUCING CRIME BILL

IT IS gratifying to find Attorney General Cummings maintaining his vigorous offense on "lawyer-criminals" in connivance with the underworld.

"Whenever it is possible for the federal power to reach members of the bar who are equally guilty with criminals themselves," says Mr. Cummings, "we intend to reach them. I think the people of the United States are in favor of that program."

The latter, surely, is a safe assumption. Law abiding citizens of the United States are well aware that organized crime is costing them more than a billion dollars annually, and they can be counted upon to approve removal of its irregular and unethical legal sanctions.

Federal agents have been making things hot for arch-criminals. And now that the same pressure is being directed against faithless legalists, prospects are bright for steady reduction of the crime bill that has been exacting such heavy tribute from society.

A professional critic is a person who thinks every artist's success due to the dumbness of the public.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

MASTERING BRIDGE (5)

ASIDE FROM the honor tricks and trump tricks of the two players becoming declarer and dummy, high honors possess another sort of value with which every player must become familiar. "Quick tricks" are the average defensive values of high honors, ordinarily capable of winning tricks against trump calls before either declarer or dummy can bring leads of the suit to which these honors belong.

Half the time one member or the other of the declaring side can trump the third lead of a suit containing only 3 cards. Therefore only honors capable of winning first or second round tricks are considered "quick" as follows: A-K, 2 tricks; A-Q, 1½ tricks; Ace, 1 trick; K-Q, one trick; K-X (symbolizing a guarded K), ½ trick. An average deal distributes about a trifle more than 1 quick trick to the four players.

In an attempt to be different from others or to simplify the subject of card values, some authors have given a single table of honor values, supposed to be useful for both offensive and defensive purposes. Of course this is an error, as the offensive values of honors always are half again as great as their normal values, while their defensive values are less than normal.

Every practical player is interested in facts. Here are some of them. The doubler A-K (no smaller cards) has 3 in 10 chances to win a second defensive trick; the trebleton A-K-Q has 55 in 100 chances to win a second defensive trick, but a 4-card suit affords only 3 in 4 chances to win a second defensive trick. While an average deal distributes only 7 quick tricks about the table, there will be 15 honor tricks so distributed, and the total number of probable tricks, with each player considering his own best call, will be 20 in number.

When played at a suit call there average to be won 6 tricks with trumps and the remaining 7 tricks with high honors of side suits, again impressing upon players how seldom more than 2 defensive tricks may be won. This is strongly emphasized by the knowledge that a strong declarer who is the one to win the majority of the seven side suits taken by high honors. Half the hands dealt should have one side or the other a game. The average defensive strength of the defenders is only 3½ tricks. Think these things over before depending upon any table of honor tricks for defensive purposes.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 38

VAL WENT swiftly through the house in search of his wife. Garenne had come to join him and they finally returned to the bedroom to stare at each other with growing apprehension. As his eyes darted about summing up the situation Val saw that the fringed shawl was missing. An uncovered box with the powder spilled out as if used hastily stood on top of the dressing table. The noise he had heard when he had first gone in to talk to Garenne must have been caused by the dash of perfume that had been knocked to the floor. It still lay there with the loosened stopper slowly dripping its contents into the carpet.

Where could the girl have gone? She had no close friends. If she had sought refuge at Sue's and found no one at home, she surely would have returned by this time.

"Her purse is there in the drawer," he told Garenne, "and she could not have ventured far in the clothes she was wearing."

The man's eyes avoided his. "I think she hasn't gone far," he snapped.

"Do you know where she is?" Val demanded.

The man shrugged. "She has probably gone to Cordray," he answered shortly.

"What makes you say that?"

"She is very friendly with the man," he said, "and a restraining hand as Val swung toward the door. "Mind," he called hastily, "I make no accusations. Only see that the slate is clean if you really intend to make a fresh start with her."

Val's face darkened. When Lia knew he would not take her away, had she turned to Cordray? "If that is where she is," he said, "I can settle all this very quickly."

Garenne broke in, "Think it over for a bit," he urged. "If Lia has any foolish notion of telling him the truth about herself, you may be sure she'll be sent home speedily enough. Remember you are an officer. No use involving yourself in an open quarrel with this fellow—in a scandal that might cause you trouble because of attending publicity."

"I shan't do anything they can hang me for," Val assured him grinning. "But I must find Lia and bring her home. And while I am waiting," whispered Walter wearily. Wan, white, woebegon was Walter, wayward, willful, worn with weakness. Wasted, waxing weaker whenever winter's wild withering winds were wailing. Wholly without waywardness was Winifred, Walter's wise, womanly watcher, who, with winsome, wooing ways was well-beloved.

"We won't wait Walter; while weather's warm we'll wander where woodlands waye. Won't we?"

Walter's wonted wretchedness wholly waned.

"Why, Winnie, we'll walk where we want, we'll wander with Willie. We'll weave willow wreaths, watch woodmen working, worms wriggling, wind-mills whirling, watermill wheeling. We will win wild whortleberries while witnessing wheat-winning."

Wholly wonderful was Winifred's womanly wisdom.

"Walter, we won't wait; we'll wander."

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

A character endeared to millions by the Saturday Evening Post stories and the books of Gilbert K. Chesterton assumes real flesh and blood and comes to life on the screen in Paramount's "Father Brown, Detective," now at the Cliftona Theatre.

As acted by Walter Connolly, lie is the same amiable, eccentric and foxy old character who catches thieves with kind words and intelligence where the police of the world had failed with their modern detective methods.

The story of "Father Brown, Detective" is built about the Flying Star diamonds in Father Brown's possession and the efforts of Flambeau, notorious jewel thief, to get them.

Paul Lukas and Gertrude Michael are cast in the principal supporting roles, and Robert Lorraine, Una O'Connor and Halliwell Hobbes appear in the featured cast.

AT THE CIRCLE

Charm, defined by the dictionary as "any alluring quality," is not everything.

But for a woman it is nearly everything, according to lovely Evelyn Laye, co-star with Henry Wilcoxon of "Princess Charming," the musical romance set in a mythical kingdom now showing at the Circle Theatre.

As the Princess Charming, Evelyn Laye has a picturesque part in which dangerous situations encompass her on every side.

Other headlines in the cast, beside Mr. Wilcoxon of "Cleopatra" fame, are Yvonne Arnaud, Gressomith and the comic Max Miller. It is a Gaumont-British production directed by Maurice Elvey.

AT THE GRAND

While to most people a horse race is just a gamble for money, to Kitty O'Hara, nicknamed "Princess," it meant winning her freedom, love and happiness.

This tense and dramatic situation supplies the keynote to the thrilling story of "Princess O'Hara," a Universal film coming to the Grand Theatre Friday and Saturday.

Damon Runyon, America's premiere sports writer, who has written many motion picture successes in the past like "Lady for a Day," "Little Miss Marker," "Million Dollar Ransom," and many others, is the author of "Princess O'Hara."

Jean Parker is co-starred with Chester Morris, portraying the appealing role of the little "Princess," whom fate thrust into one of the most harrowing experiences of her young life. She is accused of the theft of a famous race horse, which is to run against the horse belonging to the man she loves. The horse is recovered, but unless he wins the race she goes to jail.

The climax of this exciting story is both thrilling and amazing.

about it I shall see to it that, hereafter, Cordray lets my wife alone."

The man looked suddenly across at him and Val wondered whether he was stilling for time when he said, "He with you in a minute, I'm just looking out a line that has eluded me. I caught the right idea a while ago."

He called to the butler, "Wait, Taki. Mr. Preston may change his mind. And I'm not sure but that I'd prefer a highball to a cocktail."

The Japanese remained by the door and Cordray went on talking. "Bring your leave, Preston," he said. "I hope you thought over that last chat of ours. I am trusting that you will, perhaps, reconsider your decision," he looked up smilingly from his work. "I am prepared to make you a very handsome offer for that invention of yours. Something you can't afford to turn down."

"I'm not interested," Val said tersely.

"Oh, come now," Cordray laughed, quipping the russet eyebrow. "Every man has his price."

"I haven't," Val turned suddenly to the butler. "Mr. Cordray will call you when he wants you," he snapped. "Get out!"

The man stared, then went quickly through the door and closed it behind him.

Cordray's eyes had narrowed. He said, "Well, really, old chap—"

Val strode down the room toward him. "Cordray," he said, "I want to know where my wife is."

"Mrs. Preston? But how on earth should I know? The man's hard blue eyes widened in apparent amazement.

"You give me your word she hasn't been here within the last hour?"

"Of course she hasn't. But what has happened?"

Val was silent for a moment. Finally he said, "All right, Cordray. We'll let it go at that. But I want you to understand you are to keep away from my wife! You are no longer welcome in my home! Is that clear?"

Cordray said indignantly, "Preston, don't be an ass! I admire Mrs. Preston. Of course I do. Why shouldn't I? She is an extremely pretty and charming girl. But if you are hinting that I have any more than a casual friendship for her—you are insane." He wore a deeply affronted expression; his eyes met Val's squarely.

Treatment for Hay Fever Better Begun Immediately

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE DISCUSSION of the use of carbon dioxide in the treatment of hay fever, as outlined yesterday, reminds us that the hay fever season is approaching, and that if any one wants to try a new immunological treatment he, or she, should begin immediately.

While successful immunological treatment has been reported even when begun as late as a week before the beginning of the season, it is better to begin at least a month or six weeks before, and some advocate an even longer period.

By immunological treatment, I mean the attempt to build up the immunity of the body against the pollens, responsible for hay fever, by hypodermic injections of stronger and stronger extracts of the pollens responsible.

In order to make the treatment successful, it is first necessary to determine what pollen causes the attack in the particular individual patient. This is done by skin tests. A small amount of the pollen extract is injected into the skin. A wheal naturally rises. If this becomes large and red and itchy the reaction is positive. It means that the pollen whose extract caused the wheal, is responsible for the hay fever. Besides the pollens it is well to try other substances in the same manner.

Mrs. Geo. O. Thurn Recommends These Cool Cookery Recipes for Hot Weather

Use the Refrigerator More; Salads, Cool Beverages; and Dine on the Porch If Possible While Hot Weather Lasts.

Dear Friends in Circleville:
My recent visit to the New York shops made me realize more strongly than ever before, that housekeeping has been wonderfully helped by modern manufacturing. I began in the household equipment stores and departments and studied with joy the new refrigerators and ranges and the other large pieces for installation. Fortunately, no matter where I go in this country these same fine devices are on sale, for the good ones are the ones made by nationally known manufacturers and these manufacturers have distributed them everywhere.

Then in the housekeeping departments of the big stores, the smaller but also important utensils caught my attention. Molds for making jellied salads and desserts; new salad sets consisting of bowls of clear glass, or bright pottery, or polished wood. In each case these bowls had a matching foot, and space as the mixing of the salad at the table becomes a distinguished rite.

New Glassware
Then new glassware for the serving of frozen desserts and iced beverages made me realize again how very important these foods are in the midsummer menu. Now such dishes and glassware are also found in your shops, and this year, cheaper, it seems to me than in any previous year. If you can dine on the porch, buy these simple lacquered fabric table mat sets; they look like oil cloth, only they last longer, and the shine isn't quite so pronounced. They are cheap, are cleaned by simply wiping with a damp cloth, and do nicely for all porch service to family. They save laundry work!

Menu Planning
I have emphasized previously that even in hot weather at least one meal of the day should have at least one hot, cooked dish. The stomach needs the heated food as stimulant. But this may be the main dish of luncheon or supper, or it may be the breakfast. And for the most part the other meals may be salads, fresh fruits, vegetables, cold meats, cheese, fruit beverages, iced tea and iced coffee, with bread served now in place of

Questions and Answers

Should water be very hot for after-exercise bath? Should rest accompany this type of bath?
After unaccustomed or violent exercise, take a hot bath. A hot bath is described as one taken in water at 98 to 110 degrees temperature. Remove dirt and perspiration thoroughly, then lie in the tub for 10 minutes keeping the water at an even temperature. Rinse with a warm water spray, rub briskly until dry and, if possible, go to bed for an hour or for the night.

How can I refinish my wooden sink so that I will not have so much difficulty in cleaning it?

Scrub thoroughly, then dry. Bleach wood if necessary. Again let dry. Pour one line of oil on the wood and with a clean, soft cloth rub it in evenly until the wood has absorbed all the oil. Let dry for a day or two, then repeat the treatment several times until the oil has permeated the wood. If continued once a week for several weeks, a permanent finish will be secured, nice polish will result and the grain of the wood will show. All cloths used should be burned immediately to avoid danger of spontaneous combustion.

I have heard of a recipe for sherbet in which buttermilk is used and which is made in an automatic refrigerator. Do you know how this is made and what proportions are used?

Here is a buttermilk sherbet particularly popular because of the pineapple flavoring used.

Buttermilk Sherbet
2 C. buttermilk
1/2 C. sugar
1 C. crushed pineapple
1 egg white, unbeaten
1 1/2 tsp. vanilla
Combine buttermilk, sugar and pineapple thoroughly. Place in tray in chilling unit and freeze to a mush. Remove from tray to bowl; add egg white and vanilla. Beat until light and fluffy. Return to chilling unit and continue freezing.

What is Russian tea? Is it a different brand of tea?
Russian tea is generally described as a method of serving tea. It is served hot in a glass with cloves in lemon slices for flavoring. A true Russian would serve it sweetened with a spoonful of preserves.

Is it possible to whip coffee cream successfully?
Single cream or coffee weight cream may be whipped readily enough for most purposes without adding any other material to it. Use a straight sided container, such as a fruit jar, with a mouth wide enough for inserting an egg beater. Chill the cream thoroughly, allowing it to chill 24 hours, if possible. Then whip it in the chilled jar.

Recipes For July Menus

To make the veal and ham croquettes called for in the menus, use one cup thick white sauce; one tablespoon onion juice; one half teaspoon salt; one eighth teaspoon pepper; one eighth teaspoon paprika; two cups minced cooked veal; one half cup minced cooked ham. Add seasonings and meat to the cooked white sauce. Spread on a plate to chill. Then shape, dip in crumbs and egg, then crumbs again and fry in deep hot fat. When delicately brown, drain on paper toweling.

One pound American cheese, dry as possible; one tablespoon butter; two tablespoons salt; two tablespoons dry mustard; one can thick tomato soup; slices of toast.
Shred the cheese with a fork. Melt the butter, stir in the seasoning and add the cheese, and let stand over boiling water until melted. Stir occasionally. Then gradually add the tomato soup and cook until the texture is smooth. Pour at once over the hot toast.

Creamed Dried Beef

One fourth pound dried beef, three tablespoons butter; three tablespoons flour; two cups milk.
Tear the beef into small pieces. Melt the butter in a saucepan and cook the beef in it a few minutes. Sprinkle with the flour, stir well, add the milk slowly, and stir until

Constipation, Due to Insufficient "Bulk," Relieved by Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

A fine letter from Mrs. Snyder: "I have had trouble" with my bowels for years, taking all kinds of pills and drugs, with no relief. "One year ago, I saw Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and bought a package. I have good movements every day. I am 73 years old. I am telling my friends what bran has done for me."—Mrs. Sallie Snyder, 918 N. Craft Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

"Constipation due to insufficient bulk" in women.
Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to correct common constipation. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.
The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this food in place of patent medicines!

ALEX MORRISON says:

Players in the habit of gripping the club on the very end waste about ten strokes per round. I have a pupil who stubbornly held to this practice. Only the other day did I get him to hold his iron clubs two or three inches down from the end.

The long hold made him wild on his second shots. He would take three or four shots to get on the green on an easy par four hole. He didn't have complete control of the club and invariably would look up before impact.

As soon as he adopted the short hold his swing became smoother. He had plenty of wrist action and felt that he had full control of the club. He had no trouble putting his second shots on the green.

Many of them stopped close enough to the pin to afford him a putt for a birdie. It cut 15 strokes off his regular game.

It will help your game. Take a shorter hold on all of your clubs. The average in both distance and direction will be better than you've ever had before.

BRADDOCK GIVES COLUMBUS FIGHT FANS EXHIBITION

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Fight fans from the capital city had a taste today of the famed left-hand fighter who carried James J. Braddock from the nation's relief rolls to heavyweight champion within the span of one year.

Braddock, in a three-round exhibition yesterday against Jack McCarthy, stepped through the bout showing a fast left which had the Boston fighter slightly bewildered at times.

Braddock, not a heavy puncher, appeared to be pulling his punches after hitting McCarthy almost at will.

BIRDS NEAR TOP IN AA STANDINGS

Win Over Minneapolis as Mike Ryba Hurls 12th Victory of Season.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Columbus and Indianapolis were one game nearer to the top of the American Association standings by virtue of the Red Birds 5 to 1 victory over the league-leading Minneapolis Millers and the Indians 5 to 4 win over Milwaukee.

The Indians remained in second place, four and one-half games removed from the leaders, while Columbus rested in third.

Paced by Mike Ryba, handy-armed man of the Red Birds, who captured his twelfth victory of the season, the Birds hit three Miller hurriers for 10 hits. Ryba, allowed the pace-setters four safe blows.

Jack Tising, ace moundman of the Louisville Colonels, hurled five-hit ball and fanned 11 batters to give the Colonels an 8 to 2 victory over Kansas City.

With 30 players used by both teams, St. Paul took a wild affair from Toledo by setting the Hens back, 8 to 7. The Saints used four hurlers while the Hens called three pitchers to the box in a futile attempt, for victory.

DEALERS MAY LOSE LIQUOR SIGNS FEAR

County Beer and Liquor Dispensers May Lose Out as Result of Board Ruling.

Vendors of beer and liquor in Pickaway-co now displaying signs given them or leased to them by brewers may soon be ordered to remove these signs.

This development came today following a four-hour hearing before the Ohio Liquor Control Board, in Columbus Tuesday, at which representatives of signmakers, brewers and permit holders were present.

Wellington T. Leonard, chairman of the board, explained that the "giving away of signs" is against the law. The Ohio Brewers' Association went on record opposing all signs and recommended their removal from places selling beer.

It also was learned that Alfred Humphrey, enforcement chief, had collected 150 affidavits to the effect that wholesalers and distributors had given away signs to permit holders.

The board deferred action on the matter until next week. It was considered likely however, that a regulation ordering the removal of signs would be made.

M. NAUGHT VISITS COLUMBUS, July 19.—S. P. McNaught, chairman of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, was a visitor at the Liquor Control department yesterday. He conferred briefly with Wellington Leonard, chairman of the Liquor Board. The subject of the conference was not disclosed but it was understood that Mr. McNaught had presented complaints of "bad taste and disorderly conduct in places selling liquor."

Mr. Leonard, it was understood, promised an immediate investigation.

For the third time Debert Green, convicted murderer of his wife, has been spared from Utah firing squad by Governor, pending hearings on insanity petition. Green, given choice of gallows or firing squad, as provided by Utah law, chose latter.

These questions, and scores of others, rushed through the minds of Detroiters recently, following the murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney.

The inmate's body, shot through with two bullet holes, was found early one morning beside a lonely road in Detroit's River Rouge park. This park is a mecca for playseekers by day, but a lonely place at night. It is 12 miles from the downtown section of the city.

Detroit was agitated at the killing, and was more so when it was disclosed that three former business partners, and party girls, led by one man who was known in the minor underworld as a promoter and gambler, murdered this prominent man. The four, William Schweitzer, two sisters, Florence and Loretta Jackson, and Jean Miller, have confessed parts in the crime, and are before the courts of justice.

How did it occur that this conservative man, son of one of the best families of New York, with a family living in his home on the Hudson river, could be lured to his death by such a group of people? This question was uppermost in most minds, as everyone read more and more of the murder details disclosed by confessions.

Here is the answer, from members of the hotel squad of the Detroit police.

Lieutenant Fred Shanahan of the hotel squad says that only approximately 25 such cases are reported to police each year. But it is more likely, he added, that at least 25 men are swindled by such women every week. And for every woman who gets her man, there probably are three who are trying but fail.

Few Lead to Violence Few of the cases lead to a violent crime, the lieutenant believes, and fewer are reported to police because the men are afraid their relatives and friends may hear of it.

There are two accepted methods of "rolling" a man. In one, the victim loses his money in a so-called poker game. In the other, he drinks and drinks, until he becomes too drunk to know what is going on. Then his pockets are rifled. Or maybe he will drink some knockout drops. In either case, the robbers drink little; the victim drinks much.

Large Hotels "Best" The game usually starts in a hotel lobby, dining room, or cocktail bar. The bigger and more fashionable the hotel, the better. For there is where the good spenders are to be found. The party girl looks attractive, is young, and is well-dressed. When a lonely out-of-town business man tries to pick her up, she is friendly.

Lieutenant Shanahan explains: "These girls can spot a victim easily. Usually they pick someone who looks like a husband in town on business, but who is out for a good time in the evening. The girls don't appear to make the advances, but somehow they get into conversation with the man. The man may offer to buy a drink."

This, Lieutenant Shanahan remarks, is where the plot thickens. After they have had a few drinks, the girl mentions a girl friend.

The man usually is a gentleman and suggests that the girl friend join them. The three get together and usually go to the apartment of the girl. Somehow this always is alluring to a man—going to a girl's apartment.

The three start a poker game, and then the boy friend appears. He usually is an older man—to inspire confidence. He joins in the game, and the racket begins. The sucker puts up the money for his girl, but he soon finds the other three are all playing against him. They are card sharps, and often resort to cheating to get their man.

Or the apartment visit may develop into a one-sided drinking affair, with the sucker getting loaded drinks, the others ginger ale. The result is the same. The man departs late in the evening, with no money.

Difficult to Obtain Evidence Lieutenant Shanahan draws these conclusions: "These victims will not talk about things like this. They don't want the home folk to hear about it. They, therefore, keep their mouths shut. They don't even tell police. That is why it is so hard to catch the party girls and their friends."

During the investigation of the Dickinson murder, another man from Los Angeles complained that he had been a swindle victim, to the tune of $500. The girl, he said, was a "pretty brunette, wearing a Chinese print dress."

"The stakes usually aren't so high," remarks Lieutenant Shanahan. "Losses are seldom more than $50."

"No Worse Than Elsewhere" The Dickinson murder disclosed these conditions in Detroit, but police insist they are no worse here than in any other large city. It is not so bad as in many others, Lieutenant Shanahan insists.

But the murder threw the spotlight on the party girls, and ministers rallied to fight them.

The Rev. Joseph A. Vance, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in America, declared that the Dickinson murder "ought to show us the need for capital punishment."

Dr. Vance asserted: "Dickinson was lured to his ruin by two cabaret denizens and the underworld rat who controls them. After two nights of orgies. That is a terrific indictment of our civil government on three counts: First, for what is allowed to go on in our best hotels; second, for the prostitution of depraved girls to amuse depraved men, and third, for the way in which we are letting

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The Ohio Government Survey today attacked the "hit-and-run" system of communication, involving telephone, mail and messenger service, in the various state departments.

The report, presented to Gov. Davey by Col. C. O. Sherrill, chairman of the survey, especially attacked the number of switchboards and private lines used by the different bureaus.

It recommended merger of switchboards and private lines to save the state $5,300 annually. It also urged the establishment of a centralized Mail and Messenger Bureau which could save the state $2,000 more per year over the present loosely organized system.

Detroit Checks Up on "Party Girls" After Confessions in Lawyer's Death

Widespread Racket Worked Against Male Visitors

By DANIEL L. WELLS Central Press Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., July 20.—How many "party girls" operate in a city of around two million inhabitants, how do they work their racket, and how many victims are caught in their cleverly woven webs?

These questions, and scores of others, rushed through the minds of Detroiters recently, following the murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney.

The inmate's body, shot through with two bullet holes, was found early one morning beside a lonely road in Detroit's River Rouge park. This park is a mecca for playseekers by day, but a lonely place at night. It is 12 miles from the downtown section of the city.
